The distinguishing apex of the St. Mary's University Administration Building

1983-84: Looking Over St. Mary's

About Our Cover

St. Mary's University of San Antonio, Texas, represents the final stage of development of its parent organization, St. Mary's Institute, which began when four Brothers of the Society of Mary stepped off the Indianola stagecoach onto the dusty streets of San Antonio in 1852 and opened classes in temporary quarters on the downtown area still named Military Plaza.

With a permanent site on the bend of the San Antonio river in 1853, the school expanded its program, progressively added new buildings that dominated the skyline of early San Antonio, and became chartered as St. Mary's College by the State of Texas. Overcrowding in the downtown area demanded expansion, and in 1894 the boarders were moved to a new campus in Woodlawn Hills — St. Louis College.

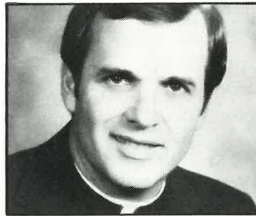

Today this revered structure, known as the Administration Building, is recognized by its distinguishing apex represented on the cover in an artistic rendering done by local San Antonio artist Hobart B. Welsh.

Message From The President

By all counts, the 1983-84 academic year was a challenging, but highly successful one for St. Mary's. In an excerpt from his Annual Report, University President Reverend David J. Paul, S.M., takes a look at the year's accomplishments — and the future.

EDITOR'S NOTE

Welcome to the first of our Gold & Blue issues for the 1984-85 academic year. We have expanded our magazine by 12 pages in order to bring you more extensive coverage of the programs, activities and achievements taking place across our 135-acre campus. This will surely prove to be a crucial year for our institution, and one that will thrust the university into the limelight with the launching of its five-year, $28.5 million advancement program, The Campaign for St. Mary's.

Before we sail off into our challenging new year, we wanted to pause and devote this issue to a review of the landmark year we've just closed.

Our cover art attempts to draw your focus to a special department of this month's publication that proudly presents a state-of-the-university opening message from the annual Report of the President. Our excerpt describes the priorities and commitments delineated in Decisions for Excellence — the university's detailed blueprint for the coming decade — as well as the data regarding our institution's financial management.

The Alumnews feature offers a capsulized look at the fine accomplishments of this past year's Alumni Association Board of Directors, as well as introduces the organization's new leadership for 1984-85.

In On Campus, we have selected to highlight our faculty accomplishments, as well as celebrate the culmination of the year's construction projects producing both the Anthony Frederick House and Sarita Kenedy East Law Library.

Sports brings us "up close and personal" to meet a woman named Athlete of the Year by San Antonio sports fans last spring, while Development rolls out the honors list when it comes to the support provided St. Mary's by alumni, parents, friends, foundations, firms and corporations.

Finally, our centerspread Profile takes you behind the collar of a cleric — admired by his fellow Marianists as truly a "monks' (brothers') priest" — whose impact on the St. Mary's community only grows stronger with each new registration.

Also, we have exciting news again regarding a recent honor for our magazine. Out of 1,325 publications from across the country entered in this year's competition, Gold & Blue received an Award of Merit from the National School Public Relations Association, Arlington, Va.

As always, though, we are most elated and encouraged by the kind comments we continue to receive from you, our readers.

Just wanted to take a moment and let you know how much I enjoy getting your Gold & Blue — and how much I appreciated your article on Brother John in this issue. He's been such a good man for St. Mary's . . .

Just received the June '84 Gold & Blue — Outreach. Sylvia McLaren's article on the appointments to the St. Mary's Board of Trustees was great. Do you think it might be possible to receive about five extra copies of this particular issue?

Many of my friends and colleagues who have read Vickie Davidson's article on me in the Gold & Blue have called to let me know how much they enjoyed it. I want to express my sincerest thanks to you for giving me the opportunity to share of myself with you and give some exposure to United San Antonio . . . Let me know if we can ever be of service to you and St. Mary's University.

Country-Western Shindig Set

Everyone in San Antonio knows of the Jersey Lilly. It's a party room with turn-of-the-century ambiance on the Pearl Brewery grounds, where many a night has been spent reliving the roisterous days of the old West. And after the night of Oct. 5, many more alumni in and beyond San Antonio will vote that Lilly Langtry's namesake is a great setting for a relaxed evening of fun. That's the date set for our Country-Western Barbecue and Dance to be cosponsored by the St. Mary's Alumni Association and Law Alumni Association. Jim Koett (BBA '63) and Ron Bird (JD '73) are collaborating on arrangements. They promise it'll be an evening to let down your hair, kick up your heels and, egged on by a lively western band, play at being a real live kicker. Included in the program will be the drawing for a Hawaii vacation for two (suggested donation $1 per ticket; no purchase necessary to be eligible to participate and win). For reservations contact Alumni Relations, (512) 436-3324.

Calling All Directory Questionnaires

With your help, the St. Mary's Alumni Association plans to have the most complete alumni directory ever prepared ready for distribution by next February. To make this possible, we need questionnaires returned promptly. You'll note that as well as alphabetized names and addresses, listings will include class years and geographical areas to make it easy to trace former classmates. Directories ordered by Nov. 1 (pre-printing) will cost $25 each. Directories ordered after Nov. 1 will cost $35 (as long as the limited supply lasts). To avoid disappointment and offer you the definitive St. Mary's Alumni Directory, we need your completed questionnaire and purchase order NOW. If you have not received your questionnaire in the mail, please call the Alumni Office, (512) 436-3324.

Father-and-son alumni Bob Ottis (BBA '51), Houston, and Anthony Ottis (BA '79), San Antonio, cross the miles to enjoy visiting together at Homecoming Oyster Bake.

Athletics Hall of Fame

The inauguration of St. Mary's Athletics Hall of Fame last spring was a huge success, resulting in gratifying visibility not only for our deserving honorees and their families, but also for the Alumni Association and university as a whole. We are already gearing up for the second annual Athletics Hall of Fame ceremony (see nomination form on page 30). The date of the event will be April 14, 1985.

Homecoming '85

Plans for Homecoming '85 are already under way. Mark your calendars for Friday and Saturday, April 12 & 13, to be a weekend of celebration and nostalgia. On Friday we'll have the Distinguished Alumnus of 1985 Banquet (see nomination form on page 30). Saturday noon will bring a 25th anniversary reunion for the Class of '60, with such notables leading the pack as 1960 graduates Bob Engberg, Bill Greehey and our president, Father David Paul. Finally, the special Homecoming Oyster Bake for alumni and friends will be held Saturday night in the Pecan Grove on campus.

Forward: Sigma Beta Chi

Also during April 1985, St. Mary's Sigma Beta Chi will hold their 35th anniversary reunion. Jim Novelty (BA '67) invites all interested to contact him for details. His address is 607 Many Oaks, San Antonio, Texas 78232, phone (512) 494-7910. Or contact Rick ("Che") Castillo at St. Mary's Admissions Office, (512) 436-3126.

Laredo Golf Tournament

Officers of the Laredo Alumni Chapter are Ernie Mora (BBA '73), president; Moe Blakey (BA '66, MA '71), vice president; Reynaldo Rodriguez (BA '58), secretary; and Margie Kraus ('60), treasurer.

The chapter will sponsor a golf tournament on Saturday, Sept. 29. Proceeds will go toward establishing a scholarship endowment to send worthy Laredo students to St. Mary's. Golfers are asked for a $50 donation to cover cost of the green fees. After the day-long tournament, a cocktail reception and dinner will be held at Laredo Country Club at $75 per couple. Alumni Association: Off With A Schott

It will be another great year for St. Mary's friend-raising, according to Michael A. "Mickey" Schott ('68), the new president of the Alumni Association.

Schott took office June 8 at a gala installation dinner in the attractive Oak Hills Country Club in San Antonio.

In taking over the gavel, Schott welcomed new board members and returning stalwarts with assurances of the group's dedication.

"As a board, we are fortunate to be involved with St. Mary's at a time when it is aiming for excellence. . . . Our job as friend-raisers is essential, and we will be there to do our part," he said.

Schott, a BBA graduate in accounting and now a San Antonio CPA, had a distinguished career at St. Mary's. He was a ROTC Corps commander; a Distinguished Military Graduate awarded a commission in the Army Field Artillery; a four-year varsity baseball letterman who served two years as team captain; a member of the student council; president of Rho Beta Gamma (St. Mary's student "Chamber of Commerce"); and an honored member of Who's Who Among U.S. University Students.

He also is a graduate of the Business School's Small Company Management Program of Harvard University, and belongs to the Texas Society of CPAs and its San Antonio chapter, the San Antonio Petroleum Accountants, the San Antonio Estate Planners Council and the Knights of Columbus. Schott is also chairman of St. Luke's Catholic Church Finance Committee.

Along with Schott an able team of officers was installed to mount the association's 1984-85 program. They are James M. Koett ('63), first vice president; Robert L. Mason ('68), second vice president; and Barbara B. Benavides ('71), treasurer. All have given unstintingly of their time and efforts and look forward to another fruitful year of endeavor.

Others installed at the banquet are a vigorous group of board members elected as regional representatives to cement and foster St. Mary's loyalties in localities throughout Texas. They are James E. Mulligan ('61), Houston; Joseph M. Ojile ('80), St. Louis, Missouri; and Donald L. Schulte ('74, '78), Arlington.

With a strong board of 31 members (see full list pg. 4), the association is determined to meet head on a challenging year of dynamic progress toward what University President Father David J. Paul, S.M., called at the installation banquet "touching the hearts and souls of the university with loving, giving and service."

As well as expressing high hopes for the future, the installation banquet was an occasion for imparting appreciation for a satisfying year of activities under the leadership of outgoing president Bob Engberg and his outstanding fellow board members.

Receiving well-deserved plaques of appreciation for his services, Bob outlined with justifiable pride the "firsts" achieved during the year under his banner.

They included a reception in Corpus Christi; a Young Alumni gathering in San Antonio under the able direction of David Kauffman ('82); a Laredo reception in conjunction with a meeting of St. Mary's Board of Trustees; and the inauguration of St. Mary's Athletics Hall of Fame.

Others receiving presentations for their service were outgoing board members John F. Kramer, treasurer, and directors Marion T. Carson, Phyllis M. Monier and the Rev. John Peters.

Generous in sharing accolades for his work, Bob named many colleagues for their special efforts toward the success of alumni activities. Among them were Maynard Braden, Barbara Benavides, Pony Karam, Jim Koett, Doug Cross, Bob Mason, Bill Dodds, Father Paul, Mary Etlinger, Mickey Schott, Jack Kramer, Larry Noll, Bob's wife, Jeannine, and John Laframboise and staff.

"Without question," Bob said, "a greatly involved board of directors has been the backbone of an effective program. You've been an outstanding team."

Before turning over association leadership to Schott's "very, very able hands," Engberg gave a gratifying rundown of the financial health of the association.

He told the assembly that the Alumni Scholarship Endowment increased by the 1984 sweepstakes* profit of $24,000, to a principal sum of about $310,000. (*No purchase necessary to be eligible to participate and win in the sweepstakes.)

"This provides approximately $30,000 per year for worthy students at St. Mary's," he explained. "The Fiesta Oyster Bake net proceeds were just under $100,000 and this, of course, provides funds for the association administration — as well as for special school projects and worthy programs."

The net result of the association's activities for the year, Engberg reported, is an operating surplus of over $40,000.

St. Mary's Christens Two Schools

St. Mary's is proud of its unchanging traditions that have held fast for more than a century: its Marianist heritage and its adherence to values shaped by the Gospels and Judeo-Christian principles.

The university is also proud of being a dynamic institution willing to make changes that will lead to greater administrative efficiency and improved academic coordination.

In the spring, St. Mary's President, the Rev. David J. Paul, S.M., announced such a change in the university's academic structure effective June 1.

The School of Arts and Sciences and Division of Engineering have been replaced by two new schools: the School of Humanities and Social Sciences with Dr. Charles L. Cotrell as dean, and the School of Science, Engineering and Technology with Dr. Anthony J. Kaufmann as dean.

Formerly, Cotrell was dean of the School of Arts and Sciences and Kaufmann was dean of the Graduate

Dr. Ronald D. Merrell, who has served as graduate adviser in the School of Business and Administration, has become acting dean of the Graduate School.

The structure of the School of Law, the Graduate School and the School of Business and Administration remains unchanged.

Restructuring the former School of Arts and Sciences into two schools will facilitate better management from the point of view of administrative size and having like disciplines grouped together, Cotrell said.

He also said that by organizationally arranging kindred academic disciplines under the auspices of two schools, a new era of cooperation, academic program development and experimentation can occur in both schools.

Further, he said that resources for the disciplines covered by the new schools can be sought more effectively by two deans rather than by one.

"Both schools stand to gain substantially in effective representation in the face of similar problems in resources. And both will benefit from the kind of administrative attention which befits an organization of smaller scale," asserts Cotrell.

Emphasizing the university's commitment to a liberal arts core in all degree programs, Cotrell said general educational requirements will be taught in both the new undergraduate schools.

"The integration and integrity of the core curriculum is more than amply safeguarded by a curriculum revision process now under way —and by plans for future reviews which will be university-wide in scope —with faculties of both schools having the primary defining and implementing role in the revision," Cotrell affirmed.

Adding his views on the reorganization, Kaufmann said the division into two schools represents a cleavage — but also a linkage, "since we will be able to improve coordination."

Changes in the structure of the university's academic administration resulted in the appointment of, from left, Dr. Anthony J. Kaufmann, dean of the School of Science, Engineering and Technology; Dr. Ronald D. Merrell, acting dean of the Graduate School; and Dr. Charles L. Cotrell, dean of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences.

“The split has been made for efficiency — not to draw a line between liberal arts and science/technology.

“Quite the contrary, we do not want to educate robots, narrowly trained in say, computer science or engineering. We will not pit technology against the humanities, but work toward an integrated curriculum with a revised common core which can be periodically updated. This way we can make sure our students get a well-rounded liberal arts education along with career-related expertise,” explained Kaufmann.

All the new deans have had long experience at St. Mary's.

Cotrell, an alumnus, joined the political science faculty in 1966, and through the years has served as department chairman, graduate adviser, and director of the master's program in public and institutional administration.

In January 1983 he accepted the post of assistant to the university president for institutional research and planning, a position he vacated in June 1983 to head the former School of Arts and Sciences.

He holds a B.A. and M.A. in government from St. Mary's ('62, '63), and a Ph.D. from the University of Arizona. He has served on numerous university committees and is well known as a researcher and analyst-commentator on voting behavior, voting rights, the election process and performance of elected officials.

Kaufmann brings a strong background of science and administration to his new post. He joined the biology department in 1969 and later became the department chairman and adviser to students preparing for professional education in medicine, dentistry and the health sciences. In 1979 he was appointed dean of the Graduate School.

He holds a bachelor of science degree in microbiology with a minor in chemistry from the University of Georgia, a master's degree from the same university, and a Ph.D. in microbiology and biochemistry from Louisiana State University.

Before joining St. Mary's he taught microbiology at East Tennessee State University, was a research associate at Louisiana State and a medical microbiologist at the U.S. Public Health Service Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta.

Merrell was appointed to the management department faculty in the School of Business and Administration in 1979. His most recent responsibilities have included advising business students in the school's graduate programs.

He holds a bachelor's degree from Baylor University, and a master's and Ph.D. in business administration from the University of Oklahoma.

His earlier teaching positions were at Laredo State University and Texas A&I at Laredo. He has more than 20 years experience in managerial personnel and consultant positions, and is recognized as a community resource person on manpower concerns such as equal employment opportunity compliance and personnel issues. — Sylvia McLaren

The new master of science degree in computer information systems is attracting considerable attention from students because of its well-integrated content. Geared to the high-tech age, the program is designed to teach students both technical competence and managerial skills to enhance their potential for advancing up the corporate ladder.

Around the Quad

Charles J. Fey has been appointed to the position of dean of students. His responsibilities include supervising student residences, student judicial procedures and student programs and activities. For the past four years he has been associate dean of student affairs at Keene State College, New Hampshire. Call It Home

As a graduate student and resident hall director in the early 1970s, Dan Carey — today completing his third year as vice president of student services at St. Mary's — lived in his share of high-rise residence halls. He remembers well the sterile, impersonal atmosphere of those rubber-stamped rooms stacked story upon story.

Now on the administrative side of the fence, Carey expresses a housing philosophy that is colored by those years in Colorado high-rises. His conclusion: residence halls housing fewer students, built in the style of residential homes, encourage both a feeling of "family" and a sense of involvement in that small community.

Carey's philosophy reflects a concurrent initiative by St. Mary's president, the Rev. David J. Paul, S.M., to build a new type of housing for the growing number of students (just over 1,000) living on campus. The merger of their ideas is being realized this fall with the opening of the Anthony Frederick House.

The very name hints of something different, something special. Other student housing facilities on campus are called "halls," as in Lourdes Hall or Dougherty Hall.

The Anthony Frederick House, with slanting roofline, shadowbox windows and brick exterior, looks like a large two-story residential home. "It is the antithesis of the impersonal high-rises of the sixties," Carey says. "This new residence is a housing alternative to fit the changing lifestyles of our students — particularly our upperclassmen."

Each of the 26 rooms, with carpeted living area and private bath, accommodates two students. Second-story rooms have lofty cathedral ceilings, a feature unheard of in contemporary residence hall architecture. Each room in the U-shaped building opens onto a grassy, shaded courtyard which encourages impromptu socializing and a special sense of community.

Other common areas — TV/game room, study/living area, kitchen, laundry room and skylit foyer — are spacious by traditional standards. An additional layer of concrete poured between the two levels reduces noise and improves fire protection.

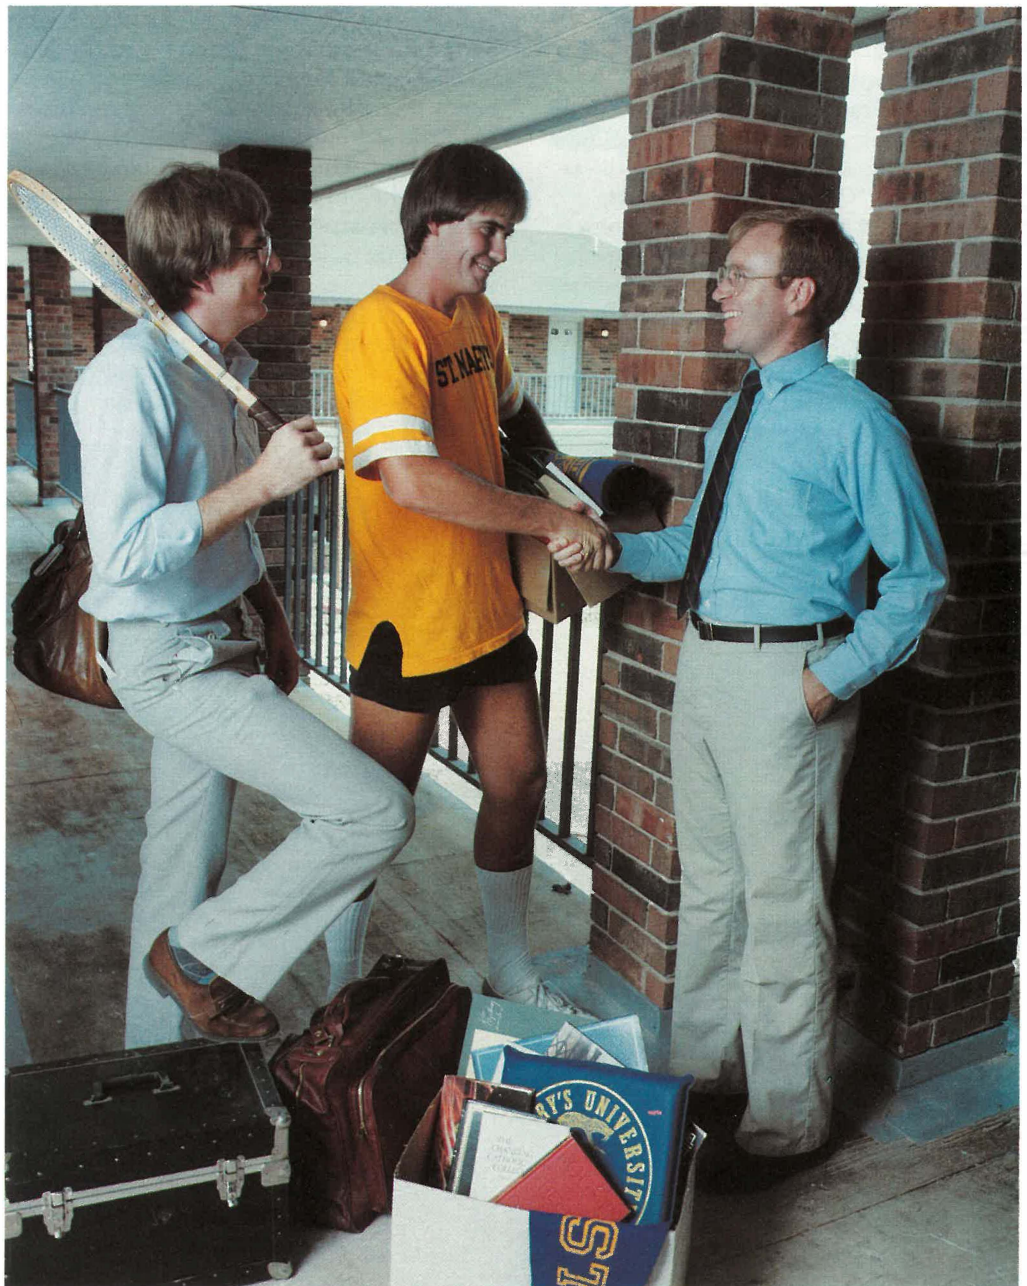

The first to inhabit the new half-million-dollar facility, situated on the old

Lawrence Welk Golf Course, are 50 junior and senior men, a resident assistant and — someone new — a member of the university's professional staff, Dean of Students Charles Fey, who'll make his home in a two-bedroom apartment within the house. This move, Carey says, will give increased visibility for university administrators among all St. Mary's resident students.

Designed by architect Bruce Tschoepe and built by one of St. Mary's own, Doug Cross ('68), the new residence is named for Brother Anthony Frederick, S.M., who gave 48 years of his life as a St. Mary's faculty member. When he retired in 1978, he was named St. Mary's first professor emeritus. Now 84, he lives in the Marianist residence on campus.

"Everyone who has known Brother Anthony Frederick thinks the naming is extremely appropriate," Carey says. "The house honors a man who's given so much to the university." — Vicki H. Sledge

Sarita Kenedy East Law Library

Arched windows and intricate brickwork create a stunning, awesome exterior for the new Sarita Kenedy East Law Library, which opens its doors to St. Mary's law students and the South Texas law community this fall. The exquisite "packaging" is not just a facade, however. Exterior attractiveness gives way to function and state-of-the-art technology within.

Law school Dean James N. Castleberry Jr. relates that administrators from other law schools who've toured the library during construction say it's one of the finest law libraries in the United States. Castleberry eagerly echoes their sentiments: "I'm really impressed with that facility. It is one of the finest."

Its sheer size — 62,000 square feet — is overwhelming. The old library, in fact, could fit within just one floor of the new two-story facility.

With spacious custom-designed study carrels, tables and seating for over 425 users, the library has a book capacity for 250,000 volumes — triple what the old law library housed. Capacity for microforms and audio-visual materials is virtually unlimited.

There are 17 conference rooms in the rectangular facility, three computer rooms, a microform viewing area, two media classrooms/auditoriums, lounge areas and an open-air patio. A rare book room is adaptable for use as a formal conference room.

The dove gray interior is characterized by high ceilings and wraparound windows which give the library a traditional, classic look — yet make it a bright, airy place conducive to study.

Construction of the "Kenedy Library," built by H.B. Zachry Co. with a gift of $7.5 million from the John G. and Marie Stella Kenedy Memorial Foundation, began 18 months ago. Six million dollars went toward building and furnishing the new library. The remainder will help convert the old library, built 17 years ago, into law classrooms and offices. The grant, made in January 1982, is the largest single gift to St. Mary's since its founding in 1852.

The university community will celebrate the opening of the new library with a formal dedication service on November 10. — Vicki H. Sledge

Sarita Kenedy East

Who is this woman whose name now identifies St. Mary's University School of Law's newest addition?

Sarita Kenedy East was the granddaughter of Captain Mifflin Kenedy, who in 1848 was commissioned by General Zachary Taylor to run gunboats up the Rio Grande, bringing supplies to the U.S. Army during the Mexican wars. He later founded La Parra Ranch — an empire of 400,000 acres and 25,000 head of cattle — and Kenedy Ranch in Kenedy County.

Reared in a Catholic home to become a generous, hospitable, refined lady, Sarita Kenedy was educated at Our Lady of the Lake University and learned to speak fluent Spanish and French.

Her husband, Arthur Lee East, was a cattleman, rancher and businessman. The two had no children of their own, but the loving Mrs. East was godmother to most of the children on and around the ranch.

With the share of the money she received from the sale of the couple's Kenedy Pasture Company in the late 1920s, East bought a ranch in Jim Hogg County. She loved the wilderness of her ranch — with its cattle, horses and wild game. Most of her fortune was amassed when oil was discovered there.

In 1960, East established the John G. and Marie Stella Kenedy Memorial Foundation in honor of her parents, John Gregory Kenedy Sr. and Marie Stella Turcotte, of New Orleans, La. A year later, she died of cancer in a Manhattan hospital at the age of 72.

Her death created a legal tug-of-war involving the foundation's board members that was to last for 20 years. St. Mary's School of Law was the first recipient of a grant from her foundation.

Learning By Doing

Learning to teach while Dr. Melba Hutsell watches is almost like being videotaped. If you're scowling, she tells you. If you're going great guns, she tells you that, too.

In many ways, Hutsell is even better than a videotape because she goes beyond merely showing her students what they're doing right or wrong to helping them learn to deal with classroom problems.

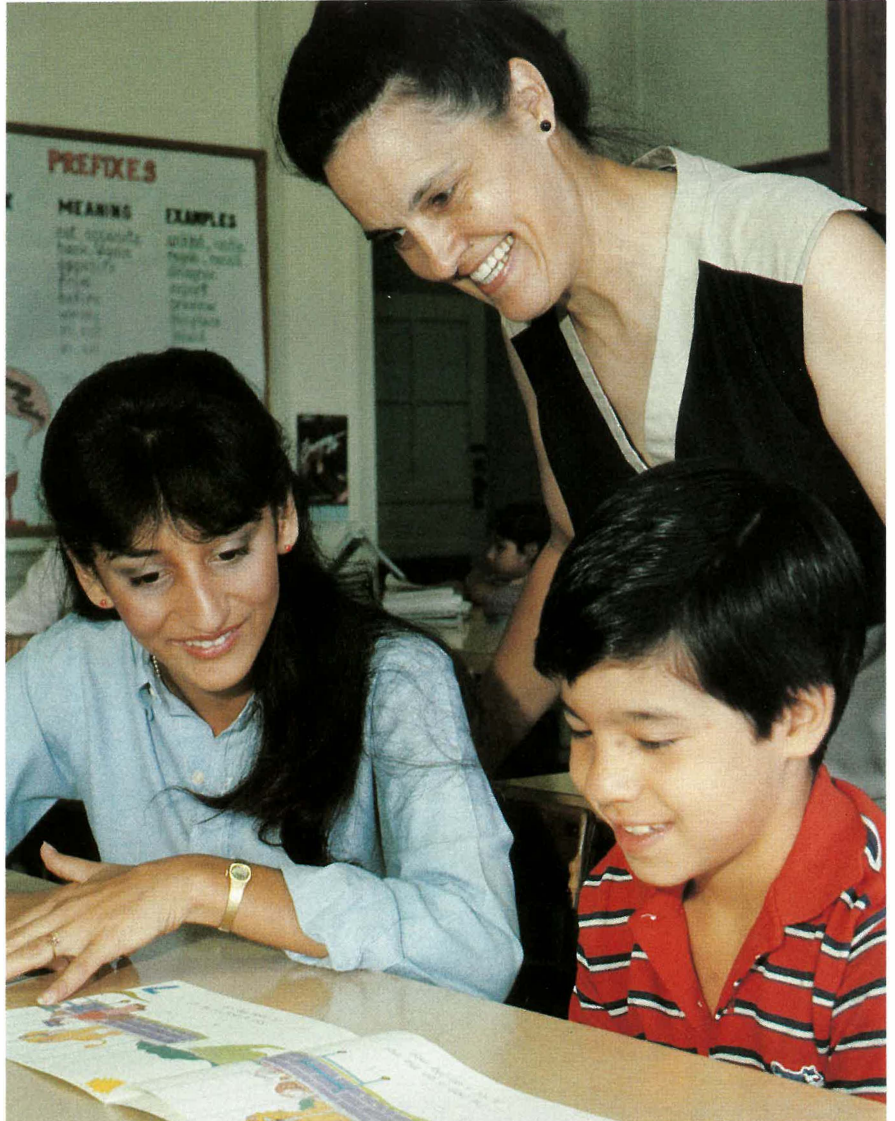

While this sort of approach — which is called supervised field experience — is not unheard of in teacher education programs, it is not the standard. Generally, students don't get their first taste of supervised teaching experience until they walk into their student teaching classroom and find themselves face to face with 20 to 30 students.

At St. Mary's, the approach is different. By the time students have reached the student teaching stage of their education, they've already been developing their teaching skills through such classes as Hutsell's.

"It makes for stronger teachers," explains Hutsell (BA '70), who joined the faculty two years ago and has been a strong force in instituting the supervised field experience component in St. Mary's education courses. "I had done some of it at Oklahoma University," she says. "And I've found both here and there that students do better if they have a chance to practice right after I teach them. With the supervised field experience, they make lesson plans for a real child. Then they instruct that child, and a professor is there to see them and give them feedback."

Her students agree. "You learn so much more by doing than by reading," explains student Charles Stervinou, a post-graduate student who took one of Hutsell's classes this summer. "It's an exceptional program. It teaches you 'the how to,'" adds Stervinou, who had worked in sales before coming back to school for teacher certification.

Supervised field experience is part of a number of education courses at St. Mary's — elementary reading, secondary reading, science and children's literature. During each of these courses, students put in eight to nine hours of practical field experience tutoring public school youngsters. In some classes, the youngsters come to St. Mary's for their tutoring, and in some classes, the St. Mary's students go to the school.

There may be only three people in this photo, but there are two students and two teachers. Education major Linda Vidaurri, left, is teaching Mark Gonzales in a special tutoring program that is part of many St. Mary's education courses. Meanwhile Vidaurri's teacher, Dr. Melba Hutsell, is supervising her progress.

But wherever the instruction takes place, it's one of those happy situations that benefits everyone. While the St. Mary's students are getting teaching experience, the public school youngsters are getting individualized instruction.

The St. Mary's teacher education students work with one or two kids at a time. "With the practice in such a controlled situation, it's easier for students to go out and apply what they learn in a more general situation," explains Dr. Gerald Pratt, chairman of the education department.

Even when working with only one student, there are, of course, problems. Says one teacher education student, "I think diagnosing is the hardest part. It's hard to know, too, where you can be most effective." She said it took her about a week to decide which of her student's problems to work on first. "I knew I had limited time. I decided to work on vowels first. You want to pick the area where you can do the most."

Sorting out the priorities is one of the important parts of supervised field experience. But when students do run across such problems, one of their professors is there to help.

"I'm glad to get a chance to tutor," says education major Linda Vidaurri, who is a senior this fall. "I can't emphasize how much better it is than just observing."— Vickie Davidson

More Than "Just" a Volleyball Player

Her energy and enthusiasm should be contagious. They become exhausting, however, to the person on the sidelines who happens to be just a full-time student — or parent — or spouse — or employee — or athlete.

For Carol Apolinar wears all five of those hats — all the time. At 27, she is married, raising a nine-year-old daughter, working part time in St. Mary's athletics department and completing her senior year in accounting. She is probably best known, however, as the "volleyball player extraordinaire" of St. Mary's.

When she was named Athlete of the Year by San Antonio sports fans last spring, sportswriters called her "the best volleyball player ever at St. Mary's." The description embarrasses her.

"I really don't feel that's true," she counters.

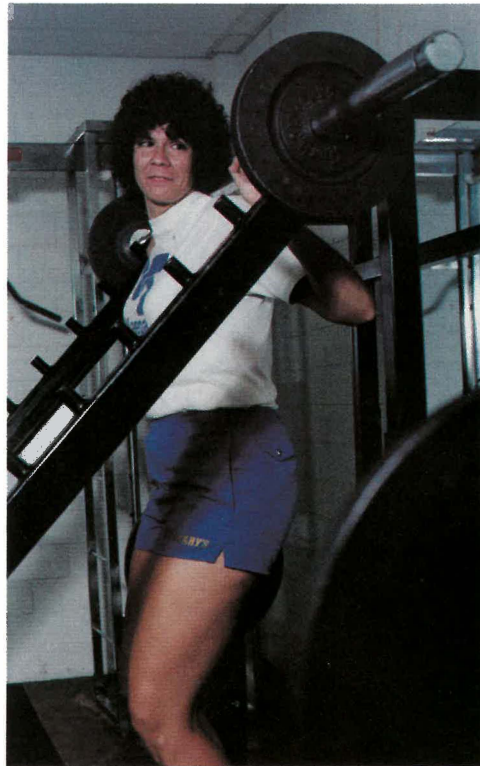

"I don't like to stand out. If one person's good, it's 'cause everybody on the team is good."

Her modesty, evidenced by reddening cheeks and lowered lashes, is convincing — and charmingly sincere.

Apolinar has received recognition as All-District, All-Conference and Most Valuable Player at St. Mary's. She's a hard hitter who enjoys the competition of the game, but hates the abuse: "It's a rough sport. I have weak knees. My feet hurt. I'm getting old. And, no, these callouses on my hands are from lifting weights, not playing volleyball."

Apolinar had never played volleyball when a girlfriend in her eighth grade class talked her into trying out for the school team. "I wasn't athletic," she recalls. "But at 5 feet 8 inches, I was taller than anything they had at Harlandale Junior High School!" She made the team that day and continued her volleyball "career" through high school.

Soon after graduation from Harlandale High School, she married Armando

Being the best isn't easy for St. Mary's volleyball "star," Carol Apolinar. The list of sacrifices begins with "little free time with my family," and ends with "a training program of running, swimming and pumping iron in the workout room of Alumni Gym."

Apolinar, who had caught her eye three summers before at a recreation center where they both worked. The young wife and mother stayed at home six years caring for their daughter, April. But when April was ready for school, so was Mom.

"I knew St. Mary's was a good school. I visited the campus, and everyone was so friendly." She demonstrates with a wave.

Volleyball was the last thing Apolinar intended to pursue at St. Mary's. Even though she still enjoyed the game, she was committed to concentrating on studying.

Again, persuadable Apolinar succumbed to the urgings of a friend. And again, she found herself suited up, the tallest woman on St. Mary's side of the net, at 6 feet.

The training program of running, lifting weights and swimming wasn't something Apolinar had bargained for. After her first two weeks on the team, she almost quit. "It was a big adjustment," she says. "When I'd come home in the evening I'd tell April, 'Even my eyelashes are tired.'"

It was Armando Apolinar who gave her the staying power.

"He helped me run —made me run — when I was tired," she says, "and pushed me through schoolwork when I was discouraged."

Days start early at the Apolinar household in south San Antonio. During volleyball season, Coach Pat Throop likes to get in two practices a day — so it's up and at 'em for breakfast with the family before a 6:30 a.m. scrimmage. Apolinar schedules classes early, so afternoons can be reserved for work, study or a midafternoon practice session. Then it's home for dinner and more studying before bedtime at midnight.

"My mother tells me I'm spreading myself too thin. Maybe I am," she says. But the current chaos won't continue forever, Apolinar hopes. After graduation, she hopes to become a certified public accountant and find a job that will allow her to spend more time with her family.

Shaking newly permed, short, brown curls that replace a waist-length braid seen swinging throughout the 1983-84 season, Apolinar says, "Maybe no one will recognize me with my new hairstyle, and I'll have four more years of eligibility at St. Mary's, instead of just one!"

Not a chance, Carol Apolinar. The sparkle in those Brenda Starr-like eyes is hard to disguise. As is the enthusiasm: "Last year I had a great time. Even if we had lost every game (which they didn't, with a 36-8 win-loss record), that would have been okay. This year, we'll have a great year — a great time together!"

Spurs Play For St. Mary's

The San Antonio Spurs always play to win. But when they take on the Cleveland Cavaliers in an Oct. 8 home exhibition game, they'll also be playing for a cause — the St. Mary's athletics program.

All proceeds of the game will go into the St. Mary's-San Antonio Spurs Athletics Scholarship Fund and will be used to help finance 26 unfunded scholarships which are awarded annually at the university.

This is the second year the San Antonio Spurs — led by Spurs President Angelo Drossos — have designated one of their first home exhibition games as "St. Mary's Night." And this year's game promises plenty of excitement.

Spectators will have the chance to see new players, established stars and the Spurs dynamic new head coach, Cotton Fitzsimmons, in action. The new Spurs players include Alvin Robertson, a member of the USA Basketball Team — that won a gold medal at the Summer Olympics.

Although the Oct. 8 game is one of the first home games of this basketball season, it is not included in the 43-game season ticket package. Additional information on the Spurs-Cavaliers game is available from the St. Mary's Development Office, 436-3711.

An Honest-to-God Priest

"For the glory of the most Holy Trinity, the honor of Mary and the salvation of my soul, I promise to God, and vow to observe, poverty, chastity and obedience, conformably to the Constitution of the Society of Mary."

With these words, young men make their first vows in the Society of Mary, pledging themselves to these commitments for one year.

But when Paul Ryan pronounced these words, in his heart the promise was for life.

From the wheat fields of Wichita, Kan., he had entered the Society of Mary Formation Center in Kirkwood, Mo., much to the dismay of his mother. As an only child — and only 14 years of age — Paul was sure to be missed at home. But after getting to know six brothers of Mary during his freshman year in high school, he knew he wanted to be like them. And if Paul Ryan is anything, Paul Ryan is determined.

"I've never regretted it," he tells me as he pauses to enjoy his cigar during an afternoon interview in the breezeway between our Administration Building and Reinbolt Hall. "They've been good years — oh, there's always the ups and downs — but I've been happy. Time has gone by so fast. Where did those last 50 years go?"

Well, the first few years were devoted to completing his education. After graduating from St. Mary's with a B.A. in 1936, Ryan went on to obtain a master's in philosophy from Catholic University of America. Then came 35 years spent teaching in Society of Mary high schools: Central Catholic (San Antonio); St. Joseph's (Victoria); St. Mary's and McBride (St. Louis); Maryhurst (Kirkwood); Holy Redeemer (Detroit); and Gross (Omaha).

Throughout all those years, Ryan was known to his students by his charity toward them. . . by his encouragement of them. The lines outside Ryan's confessional were always the longest, and the lights inside his office often burned into the late night as many of his students — and alumni — streamed in in search of the chaplain's fatherly ministry.

After administrative work for the St. Louis province that focused on development and public relations projects, Ryan was appointed Registrar at St. Mary's University in October of 1973. Since that time, he has worked tirelessly to provide the campus with an efficient, smooth-running registration process. He feels good about what he has been able to accomplish during the past decade, and lucky about the student contact he's been able to enjoy during his years at St. Mary's.

"Our students are top-notch. It's a pleasure to deal with them. I kinda get a kick out of it. Plus, what we do in the registrar's office makes it possible for everybody else in the university to function. You could say we're the oil that greases the wheel," he points out proudly.

He's right, of course. With Ryan's management and exceptional organizational skills, the registration process has been totally integrated with the other systems of the university via its central computer.

Transcript requests. Grade reports. Class schedules. It all makes for long days. Long days that always begin, however, with Ryan's offering 7:35 a.m. Mass for the university community in Assumption Chapel. It's something he has done for years, and it's part of the reason he's so well-known for being one of those sturdy, straight-and-narrow, honest-to-God priests who calls it like he sees it. For Father Ryan, it's black or white; there's no need for the variation allowed for by shades of gray — and no room for such ambivalence.

"I have tried to have an open mind to a lot of these (Vatican II) changes. Fundamentally, I'm the old-time priest, though. When the Church had us turn around to face the people for Mass, I was happy. I had always thought that giving them my back was discourteous. But I don't like to pan the congregation like a TV camera. When I'm saying Mass, I'm praying to God. He should be the One I'm thinking about. Except during the sermon — that's the time I concentrate on the people at Mass. But, as you know, I can't stand long sermons; the mind can only accept as much as can the seat of the pants," he says in his typically down-to-earth manner.

Smiling widely, he takes a puff of his nearly constant companion, his cigar.

"I want you to know that I never smoked a cigar until I was 40 years old. The day the price of cigarettes went over 20¢ a pack, I quit'em. That day. With a cigar, you can work on it all day long," he states quite seriously before he points out to me the small, inconspicuous crevice alongside the Administration Building that he has designated to be the parking place for his cigar during the day when he's inside working. Like a good and faithful buddy, that cigar sits on that rock — just a few steps from his office door — obediently perched until Ryan can find time for a break and come to retrieve it.

Father Ryan — who, by the way, is affectionately called "Popsy" by our university's president — will be facing retirement on May 31, 1986. But, as usual, he's determined to make the best of it. "I'm not sorry. If my mind stays half as dense as it is already, I'll be fine. I want to stay here, though. I want to be buried in that cemetery right over there," he firmly announces as he refers to the Marianist graveyard behind Garni Hall.

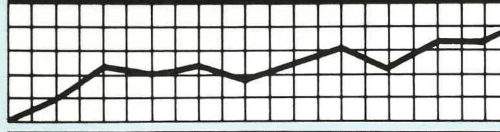

"You know, even now I love to stop by that ol' cemetery and talk to some of those brothers buried there. Some of them really had a lot of influence on my life . . . for the good, of course!

"It's been a great life. And when I finally get to meet the Man upstairs, I bet he's just gonna say, 'Thanks, Ryan, you tried hard. Don't really know how you made it up here, though . . .'"

Well, Paul Ryan, there's a whole lot of us down here who'll know.

Determination. Sheer determination.

Message From The President

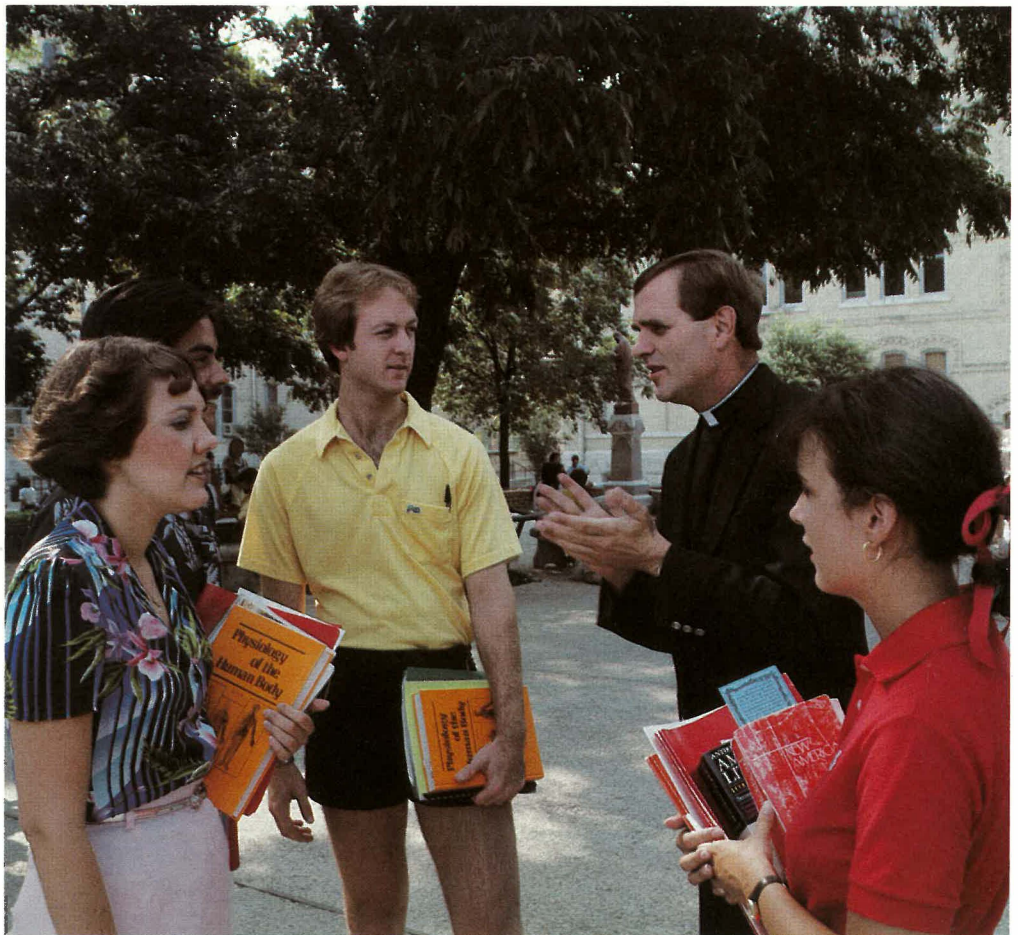

Editor's Note: The following is a look at the past year by St. Mary's President, the Rev. David J. Paul, S.M. It is excerpted from the Report of the President, 1983-1984.

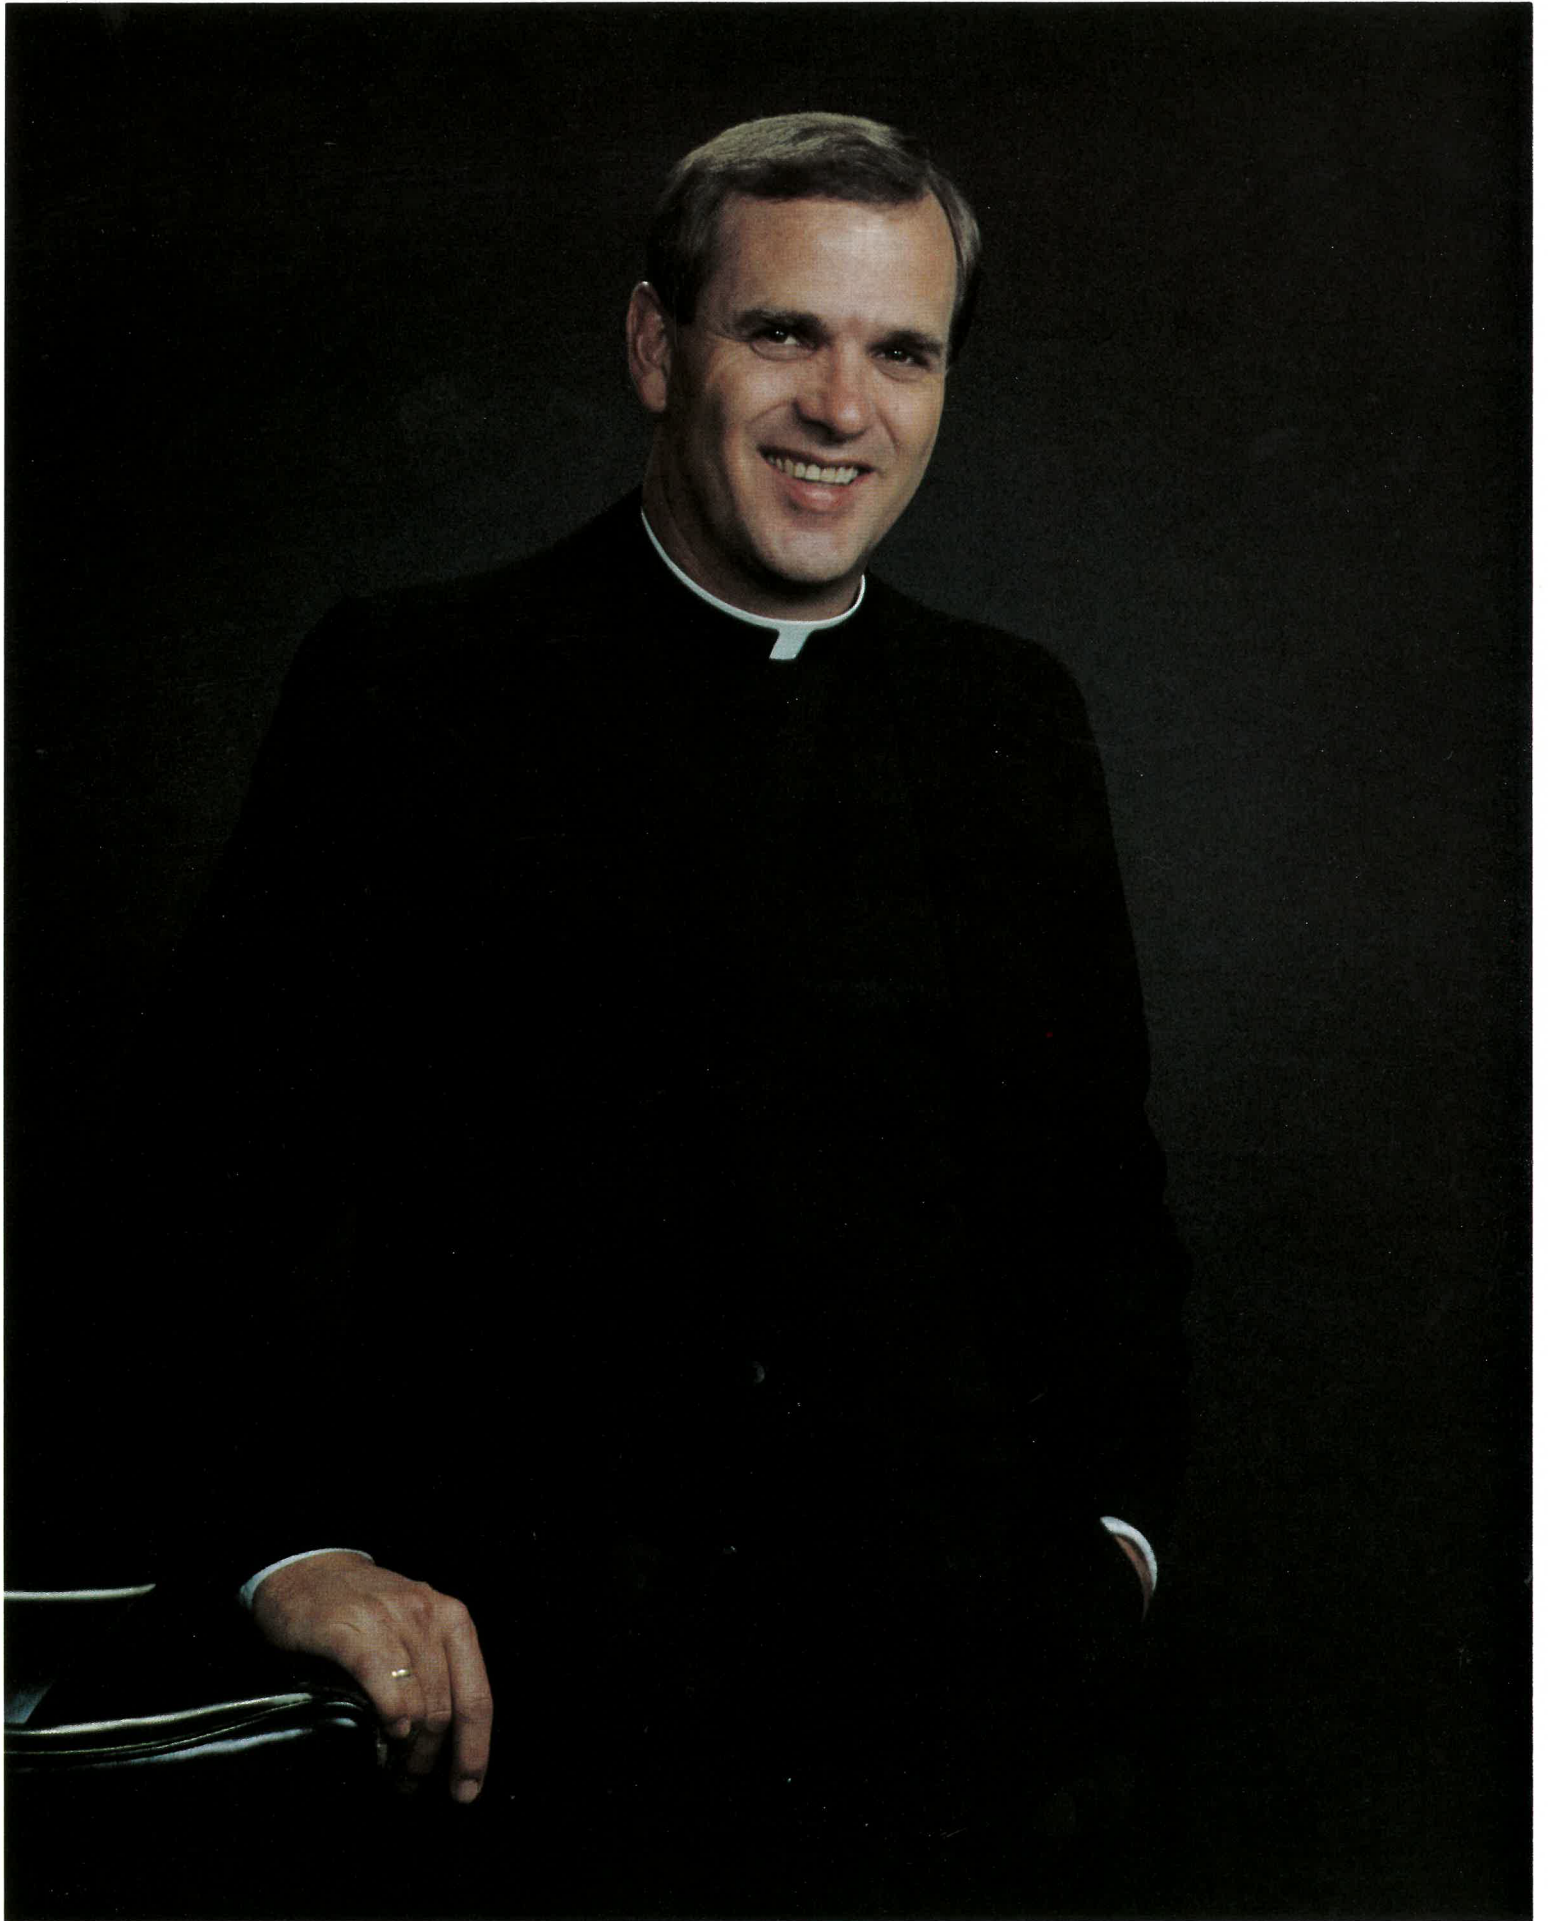

The 1983-84 academic year will be remembered as an important landmark in the long and distinguished history of St. Mary's University. It will be remembered as the year of Decisions for Excellence, the university's articulation of its priorities and commitments to meet the challenges of the 1990s and the millennium beyond. Indeed, it was one of the most challenging and successful in St. Mary's recent history, for the entire university family dared to dream and, as a result, created a vision of what might yet be for St. Mary's.

Decisions for Excellence is nothing less than a detailed blueprint for the achievement of excellence at St. Mary's University over the next decade. It is the result of more than a year of prayerful and creative planning and intense effort on the part of the administration, faculty, staff and students of St. Mary's to steep ourselves in our Catholic and Marianist heritage, evaluate our present, and articulate our future. Guided by the mission of the university as a community of faith committed to excellence in education, dedicated to scholarship and reaching out in service to the human family, we have dared to envision that St. Mary's can and will become the preeminent Catholic university of the Southwest by the year 2000. Never before in our history have we prepared for the future with such boldness, scope and imagination.

Permit me to share with you some of the more significant priorities and commitments that we have determined, some of which have already been achieved as we begin the 1984-85 academic year:

- the development of a broad range of new degree programs and courses to keep pace with today's and tomorrow's rapid developments in business, the professions, science and technology;
- the creation of two new schools — the School of Humanities and Social Sciences, and the School of Science, Engineering and Technology — to give a stronger identity to these two vital components of a university;
- the maintenance of the state of the art in computer technology and the expansion into new degree programs and computer services throughout all academic programs;
- the retention of our current quality faculty and the recruitment of even more distinguished professors through the establishment of 11 endowed chairs and 36 endowed professorships;
- the retention and attraction of outstanding faculty through the upgrading of faculty salaries in order to be competitive with the best private universities in the Southwest;
- the establishment of a substantial scholarship endowment to attract deserving and highly qualified students;
- the construction of a new Student Center to be the "living room of the campus" while enhancing our students' social, religious and recreational life;

- the construction of a new Athletics Complex in order that our interscholastic and recreational athletics programs be upgraded to complement a great university; and

- the development of a wide array of programs to nurture the personal and spiritual development of our students, flowing from a deep and enduring Marianist commitment to value-centered education.

The decision has been made — and it is for excellence as a Catholic university. The task is certainly a challenging one. It will demand the finest effort of the entire university family. It certainly would be easier simply to aspire to be a great university and not worry about being a Catholic university as well. Obviously, we are swimming against the current when we profess the eternal and the spiritual to an age so caught up in temporal and material concerns. Yet we hold fast to the ideal of intellectual inquiry in the context of the Christian message. To teach students to cherish values, prayer, grace and eternal life lies at the core of a St. Mary's education. This is our commitment and our challenge. The decision has been made.

To that end, we have organized the most extensive capital fund drive in the university's history, The Campaign for St. Mary's. Our priorities for excellence have been drafted and a price tag on those elements that could be quantified has been determined. Our entire university family — faculty, trustees, administrators, staff, alumni, students and benefactors — now have the opportunity to join forces with William E. Greehey, the chief executive officer and chairman of the board of Valero Energy Corporation, who has committed himself to lead The Campaign for St. Mary's. Mr. Greehey, Class of '60, has recruited an outstanding Campaign Cabinet composed of some of the most influential and respected members of the business and professional community to serve with him. I am confident that The Campaign for St. Mary's will achieve its goal of raising $28.5 million — and even surpass that goal — so that we might translate Decisions For Excellence into a university of excellence.

The road to excellence, however, is steep and demanding. Yet, it is in striving toward great and noble goals that we discover the meaning and purpose of our lives. It is to this end that I invite the entire university family to join in achieving the future course of the university that together we have charted. On his visit to the United States, Pope John Paul expressed the vision of a great Catholic university in these words:

"The Catholic university must educate young men and women of outstanding knowledge who, having made a personal synthesis between faith and culture, will be capable and willing to assume tasks in the service of the community and of society in general, and to bear witness to their faith before the world."

Let this vision of John Paul be our vision. And may God and His Holy Mother, to whom this university is dedicated, keep and guide us on our way.

President,
St. Mary's University

Highlights of 1983-1984

Blueprint For The Future —

"Decisions for Excellence: Priorities and Commitments of St. Mary's University — A Report of the President to the Board of Trustees" was released in early 1984. This report, which followed a year of extensive study and creative planning by the administration, faculty and staff, is a detailed guideline for the achievement of excellence at St. Mary's over the next decade.

Moving Toward Excellence —

The Campaign for St. Mary's, a $28.5 million development program, was announced in April. The money raised will go toward advancing academic excellence and building a new athletics/convocation complex and a new student center.

New Law Library —

The Sarita Kenedy East Law Library was completed this summer. The $6 million library spans some 62,000 square feet and will serve as a major legal research facility for the entire Southwest. For more details please see page 10.

Top Law Grads —

St. Mary's recent law school graduates ranked second in the percentage of students passing the Texas Bar Exam in February. More than 92 percent of our graduates passed the exam.

New Programs —

In its ongoing process of updating courses and degree programs so that today's students will have the background they need for tomorrow's world, St. Mary's periodically adds new classes and programs. This year's additions included a Master of Business Administration specialization in Computer Systems Management and a Master of Science degree program in Computer Information Systems.

Hall Of Fame —

St. Mary's Alumni Association racked up several firsts this year — among them the creation of an Athletics Hall of Fame. In special ceremonies this spring 17 athletes, coaches and associates were inducted.

Icing On The Cake —

The programs were already good, but it was icing on the cake when St. Mary's music program and counseling program were awarded prestigious national accreditations. The music department was accredited by the National Association of Schools of Music, while the counseling program received accreditation from the International Association of Counseling Services, Inc.

Share The Vision —

St. Mary's institutional advancement program set a record this year, bringing in a total of $1,503,481 in both unrestricted and restricted giving combined — a 32.7% increase over the record 1982-83 total.

Institutional Management

St. Mary's completed its 1983-84 academic year with a surplus of slightly over $700,000 on operating revenues of approximately $19.3 million. A balanced budget is projected for 1984-85.

Tuition and fees comprised approximately 62% of the university's operating revenues. Over 82% of all expenditures were devoted to education and associated general activities.

St. Mary's endowment is $9.9 million and its buildings and plant are valued at more than $49 million. With a view towards further strengthening its financial position, St. Mary's has announced the most ambitious development program in its history, The Campaign for St. Mary's.

Internal fiscal controls continue to be strengthened and a comprehensive analysis of St. Mary's budget process is ongoing.

Extensive documentation supporting budget requests were required of all administrative areas and requests for expenditures were closely monitored by the appropriate vice president. From improved management practices such as these a surplus was achieved that, together with last year's surplus, places St. Mary's in a sound financial position.

Charts I and II reflect St. Mary's revenue and expenditures during 1983-84. Chart III indicates the specific elements that constitute St. Mary's educational and general expenditures.

St. Mary's Tomorrow

Imagine a great Catholic university of the future.

The Catholic university of the future is modern and progressive, providing curricula that will prepare its students well for life in a rapidly changing information society. Yet it is also traditional, nurtured by roots that reach deep into the soil of its Christian heritage.

The Catholic university of the future is academically stringent, demanding of its students the highest levels of intellectual discipline and analytical rigor. Yet it is also profoundly concerned for the personal and spiritual growth of its students, seeking to nourish the heart and soul as well as the mind.

The Catholic university of the future is an elite training ground for each new generation of leadership. Yet it opens the doors of educational opportunity to talented and motivated individuals of all social backgrounds — not just to the privileged few.

The Catholic university of the future provides specialized training for productive careers in business and the professions. Yet the professional training that it offers is built upon the firm foundation of a broad and liberating value-centered education.

The Catholic university of the future contains within itself a multitude of intellectual and cultural traditions. Yet it holds fast to its faith in the universality of truth and the unity of the human family.

The Catholic university of the future possesses a strong and abiding sense of community; yet it reaches out in service to its city, its region, its nation and the world.

Imagine a great Catholic university of the future.

Imagine St. Mary's tomorrow.

CLASS NOTES

Putting Motherhood and Dentistry Under One Roof

One thing about Rose Kathleen Maginot, you can bet she'll never be afraid of the dentist. And that whirr of the dentist drill — a real nerve-grinder for most of us — will be just like a comforting sound of home.

But then, the dentist's office has been rather like home to little Rose Kathleen. From the age of one week, the 15-month old toddler has been spending her days with Dr. Della Corales (BS '78) — otherwise known as "Mom" — in Mom's dental office.

"It's worked out really well," says Corales. "She's been a very good baby. I've never had to really stay off work because of her, and she hasn't cried much."

Corales, who went on to get her D.D.S. from the University of Texas Dental School in San Antonio after leaving St. Mary's, initially had her doubts about the combination of motherhood and dentistry under the roof of her dental suite. But there weren't a lot of choices open to her when Rose was born; Corales' husband, Capt. Jim Maginot, also worked during the day, and it wasn't easy to get a one-week old child into a good and convenient day care center. Besides, Mom wanted her near.

"I had a friend who had a dentist in Corpus Christi, and that dentist kept her baby in her office with her. So I thought I'd give it a try."

Since then, the two have arrived at Corales' offices in San Antonio's Collins Gardens area every day at 8:30 a.m. or so. One of the dental treatment rooms has been converted into a nursery and Rose, who is still sleepy at that time of the day, gets deposited in her play pen while Mom gets to work. Throughout the day, Mom, or one of her assistants, checks on her, and Mom blocks out time for her at lunch.

"I was afraid the noise and the drill would bother her," says Corales. "But they don't. I was also afraid she'd be shy around strangers, but she isn't. She sees lots of people here. And she hasn't been developmentally delayed. She crawled at the normal age and walked at nine months and is already talking away."

Little Rose has also gotten used to the dentist's chair. She's not the least bit hesitant about crawling up, leaning back and letting Mom take a look at her teeth.

"Sometimes, I use her as a role model for other children who are afraid of the dentist's chair," say Corales. "Once they see Rose happily climb into the chair and allow an examination of her mouth, it usually eases their fears."

Now that Rose is at the toddler stage and moving around a lot more, things will change. Corales has hired a sitter to be with her during the summer, and says she may hire someone regularly to sit with her. "I've also been thinking about enrolling her in a day-care center several days a week so she can be around other little kids. I want to do what's best for her."

Still, Corales is not hesitant about recommending childcare at the office for parents who can arrange it. "I'm really glad I've been able to do it."

—Vickie Davidson

Will the future at St. Mary's be as bright as its past? Students, faculty & staff sure think so. That's why we're dipping into our own pockets for THE CAMPAIGN FOR ST. MARY'S. And while the faculty & staff across the campus are busy signing their five-year pledge cards, 75 student volunteers will be out working hard on the Say Yes Student Campaign. The way we see it — the future for St. Mary's has never looked brighter.
