On the Covers

On the front cover, from left, are Brother Terry O'Connor, S.M., Brother Bill McCarthy, S.M., the Rev. John A. Leies, S.M., and Brother Edward Loch, S.M., who reprised the roles of the original Marianist pioneers who arrived in San Antonio by stagecoach in 1852 to begin the educational enterprise that became St. Mary's University and Central Catholic High School. On the back cover, St. Mary's President Charles L. Cotrell, Ph.D., and Central Catholic High School President, the Rev. Joseph Tarrillion, S.M., ride through the streets of downtown San Antonio atop an authentic circa-1800s stagecoach to re-enact that historic event.

From the Editor

Americans have been grappling with concerns about national security since the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon 15 months ago. St. Mary's law professor Jeff Addicott, an expert in international and national security, sees hope for the advancement of internationally recognized human rights through the cloud of fear and uncertainty that has enveloped our country and the world.

At St. Mary's, the graduate program in International Relations is committed to educating students in the interrelatedness of all countries and their peoples. Program director Larry Hufford, Ph.D., recruits students who want to be a part of the solution to the world's complex problems. Learning from the program's interdisciplinary approach, IR graduates are making a difference around the globe.

History was made this past summer when four provinces of the Society of Mary merged into one, the Marianist Province of the United States of America. Most of us will remember the brothers and priests who taught us here were from the St. Louis Province. Now St. Mary's University can benefit from Marianists of the former Cincinnati, Pacific and New York provinces.

St. Mary's University is coming to the end of a year of unparalleled celebration. From the spectacular gala that kicked off our Sesquicentennial last January, to the rededication of the University to Mary in September and the reenactment of Marianists arriving in San Antonio orchestrated in October, 2002 is a year all of us will remember.

Many of you attended one or more of our anniversary events—thank you for your interest and support. Those of you unable to be with us in person may enjoy taking a look at the year in review on pages 12 and 13. Please remember that all of you are the building blocks of the University that stands strong and proud today.

And during this busiest of holiday seasons, let's take time to reflect on our blessings for we all have many. May the joy of the season remain with you and your family throughout the year.

FROM AROUND THE GROVE

■ Short Subjects

Law Students Continue Win Streak

St. Mary's law students have maintained their dominance in external advocacy competition by winning the Lone Star Classic National Invitation Mock Trial Tournament in November.

St. Mary's teams grabbed first and third places in a competition where students demonstrate their courtroom skills while acting out imaginary civil and criminal cases.

Top honors went to the St. Mary's team of Austin Poda, Andie Champagne, Craig Saucier and Leslie Massengale. Poda also was named the tournament's best advocate.

More than a dozen schools were represented, including teams from Stetson University, Tampa, Fla.; the University of Texas; Baylor University; the College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va.; the University of Houston; and Southern Methodist University.

The competition was held in civil courtrooms at the Bexar County Courthouse. Local lawyers served as judges but did not know local students from others as teams were identified only by number.

Upgrades Bring More Flavor to Campus Dining

A section of the dining room in the Diamondback Café has been renovated to make room for more selections and service. The area features an 18-foot salad bar, soup station, pizza/pasta station, Asian noodle bar and a mini convenience store. A second phase calls for enhanced outdoor café seating.

Last spring, moot court teams from St. Mary's won the American Bar Association's National Appellate Advocacy Competition and the Texas Young Lawyer Association Moot Court Competition. ■

Charles Francis Welcomes New Tenants

Newly renovated Charles Francis Hall reopened its doors this past summer.

Tenants in the old residence hall include: technology/planning and institutional research; the Student Health Center; School of Humanities and Social Sciences dean's offices; and faculty offices for several departments.

Renovations also include classrooms with high-tech connectivity and art studios. The health center features examining rooms, a lab and doctors offices, and the building houses a conference room with high-tech connections. ■

St. Mary's Extends Reach of Distance Education

The distance education program in theology was expanded this past fall to graduate students in Austin, Waco and Bryan.

The University is collaborating with the Austin Diocese to use distance learning to prepare lay leaders for various church ministries throughout the area. Classes are conducted through live, two-way video conferencing technology.

The Corpus Christi Diocese is continuing its partnership in the satellite program for the fifth consecutive year. ■

Dude, It's a Dell

Freshmen and juniors received new laptop models this fall as St. Mary's became the first undergraduate university in San Antonio to have a Dell University Honors program.

University Rekindles South America Connection

St. Mary's President Charles L. Cotrell, Ph.D., and representatives from the faculty, admissions and advancement traveled to Chile and Peru in July to visit potential international students and parents, and to reconnect with alumni.

Ruben Candia, Ph.D., languages department chairman, accompanied Cotrell to Chile where St. Mary's formed a student exchange program with the Universidad Mayor in Santiago to complement the business school's Southern Cone Program.

Cotrell also attended gatherings in Lima with parents and potential students from high schools and Peruvian alumni.

The trip highlights the University's commitment to attract more international students and rekindle St. Mary's relationship with South America. ■

St. Mary's Sustains Critical Acclaim

St. Mary's continues to receive critical acclaim. For the ninth consecutive year, the University is ranked in the first tier among "America's Best Colleges" in the West region, according to U.S. News & World Report's 2003 college guide.

In the ranking system for top Universities-Master's, which includes 572 schools, St. Mary's is eighth for best value and moved up to 11th academically in the West region, which extends from Texas to Washington state.

The national magazine bases its rankings on academic reputation, graduation and retention rates, faculty resources, student selectivity, financial resources and alumni giving. ■

PPC Debates Education Successes, Shortcomings

The Fall 2002 President's Peace Commission presented a three-day program on "U.S. Education: Passing or Failing?" examining controversial issues in education such as standardized testing, textbook choices, school vouchers and bilingual education.

Recent election research indicates that nine out of 10 Americans place education as their highest priority. The President's Peace Commission is designed to stimulate and encourage debate.

The Spring 2003 program will examine the role of the United States in the world today. ■

Professors' First Books Chronicle Terrorism, 20th Century Theologian

Akhahenda, Ph.D., and Theology assistant professor Kevin Mongrain, Ph.D.

Today on NBC . . . It's St. Mary's!

Veteran weatherman Willard Scott enthusiastically congratulates St. Mary's University on its 150th anniversary during the Labor Day telecast of the "Today Show."

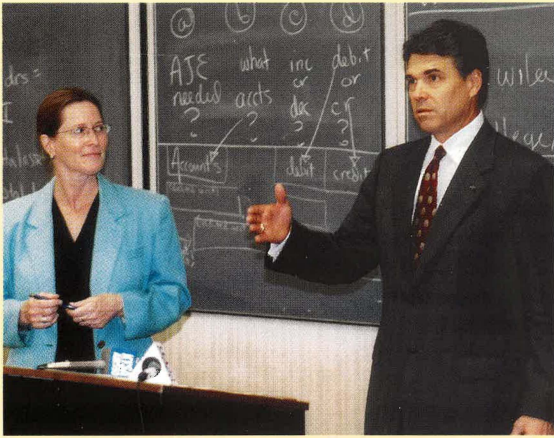

"When Blood and Tears United a Country: The Bombing of the American Embassy in Kenya" highlights the trauma and recovery of Douglas Sidiolo, a Kenyan who lost his eyesight in the 1998 explosion. Akhahenda also explores Kenya's political history, rife with ethnic divisions and uncertainty until the terrorist attack, when Kenyans responded with a spirit of national unity not seen since it sought independence from the United Kingdom in 1963.

Akhahenda's book is published by University Press of America Inc.

Mongrain also has released his first book. In "The Systematic Thought of Von Balthasar: An Irenaean Retrieval," the theology professor examines the internal logic of Balthasar, one of the most important theologians of the 20th century. The modern theologian, who died in 1988, Douglas Sidiolo, left, injured in the U.S. Embassy bombing in Kenya in 1998, is highlighted in a new book written by Communication Studies associate professor Elijah Akhahenda, Ph.D., right.

Can America Afford to Stand Silent?

by Jeffrey Addicott, Assistant Professor of Law

ince the events of Sept. 11, 2001, the world has entered into a period fraught with uncertainty and yet, strangely, there shines a renewed hope for peace and the advancement of internationally recognized human rights.

Although a chief characteristic of the war on terror is that the United States stands alone as the world's only remaining superpower, this is not the central hope of the era. The central hope rests in the great promise of a world more fully based on governments who adhere to human rights and democratic values spelled out in the Charter of the United Nations.

Unlike the Cold War era, the war on terror offers a chance to advance human rights and democracy in areas of the world heretofore untouched.

Contrary to the voices of totalitarian despots such as Iraq's Saddam Hussein, there is an intense global interest in securing the blessings of peace, prosperity and human rights that the West has so long enjoyed. The war on terror creates one of those rare moments in history where a window of opportunity opens for the world to make serious and lasting strides toward the ever-elusive goal of controlling aggressive warfare and improving respect for the normative values of human rights.

Promoting Human Rights

If the international community, led by the United States, does not find ways to realistically promote and foster at least the most fundamental categories of human rights spelled out by treaty and custom, the terrorism exemplified by the Sept. 11 attacks on America is sure to be only a taste of things to come. In the short view, global terrorism will only meet its end because of the efforts and leadership of America.

Battlefield victories alone will not bring a peace that can extend beyond a handful of years. Long-term periods of peace and stability require an attendant advance in institutionalizing the blessings of human rights values—the freedoms encapsulated in our own Bill of Rights and set out before the world in the United Nations Charter.

Assisting in the incorporation of human rights values into the institutional framework of, for example, a new Afghan government is not merely an end worthy unto itself. In the quest to avoid war and promote the full range of human rights, such efforts benefit not only the Afghan people, but create a society which can peacefully coexist with the whole of the world community.

It appears fundamentally obvious that activities pursued by democracies are substantially better than the activities pursued by totalitarian regimes such as the Taliban in Afghanistan and those now in power in Iraq, Iran, Syria and Libya. While it has long been suspected that stable democracies firmly committed to human rights do not make war on each other, engage in terrorism, or abuse their own people, the empirical evidence now demonstrates this correlation. The debate on this point is over.

American author Mark Twain once remarked that it was not enough to be on the right track, one also had to keep moving to avoid getting run over. Thus, the central question of how to defeat terrorism now becomes how best to quickly impress solid human rights values in other national entities. Most certainly, human rights values become solid and irreversible only through the development of institutions designed to promote them. Institutionalization must be the criterion.

The United States must accept that it has an obligation to assist any country endeavoring to create governments grounded in basic human rights. Liberated nations in the war on terror will eagerly embrace the basic principles of liberal democracy and self-determination, but will need immediate assistance to implement an institutional framework to accommodate their desires for the full range of human rights.

Without meaningful assistance to translate the battle cry of human rights into an institutional framework, it is naive to assume that the democratic values and human rights will germinate, for example, in places such as the new Afghanistan. Aside from country specific issues, whether one concentrates on sectarian fragmentation or religious bias, the euphoric hope for instant world peace and greater human rights in the wake of the war on terror is presumptuous. The globe is a dangerous place.

Indeed, the danger of global terrorism is far more pronounced than ever before. Dictators such as Saddam Hussein do not need sophisticated technology to deliver weapons of mass murder. The new breed of al-Qa'eda-styled terrorists are the delivery system for weapons of mass murder. Due to the growth of terrorist activities throughout the world, it is virtually impossible to take a defensive posture against every potential attack.

U.S. Stands as Positive Model

In short, the United States cannot afford to be indifferent to the moral values that are the true source of its global influence. Judged by any positive standard, be it in the field of human rights, self-determination, economic opportunity, or privacy related to property and person, the United States stands out as a positive model.

But America's most fundamental value does not reside in her military might or industrial complex. Those mighty pillars merely provide support for the United States' most enduring commodity—human rights flourishing under a systemic respect for the rule of law. ■

He is Brother Stephen Glodek, most recently the New York Provincial. Assistant Provincial is the Rev. James Fitz, former Cincinnati Provincial.

A united Marianist Province of more than 600 members was created July 1, 2002, when four of the five American provinces of the Society of Mary merged to encompass institutions from the eastern seaboard to the Pacific Ocean, and even farther afield to Puerto Rico, Mexico, Hawaii, Korea, India, Kenya, Malawi and Ireland.

Four Become One

The newly formed province has three universities—St. Mary's, the University of Dayton and Chaminade University of Honolulu—numerable high schools and parishes, several retreat houses, and sundry other ministries that can be found in places such as Bangladesh and the Czech Republic.

On that historic day in July, after several years of study, discussion, interchange, meetings and assemblies, the four provinces—Cincinnati, St. Louis, Pacific and New York—merged into one, establishing the unified Marianist Province of the United States of America.

Why Unify?

The question: "Why was the merger effected?" is continually asked. The answer, put simply, is that the move will result in personnel savings, flexibility and energy.

The number of Marianists in each province was declining because of the lack of vocations. Additionally, our membership is becoming increasingly older.

According to our Rule of the Society of Mary, each province is led by an administration of at least four or five members. Merging into one cuts back on administrative personnel. Furthermore, the new arrangement allows much greater flexibility in placing Marianists. With separate, individual provinces—whose own numbers may have been dwindling—men were not easily lent to other provinces.

Also, there are hopes that creating a united province will stimulate renewed enthusiasm. New beginnings often have the power to generate vitality.

The only American province not joining in the merger—at least for now—is the Province of Meribah, which consists of some 40 members in the New York City area. It was established separate from its mother Province of New York by a General Chapter of the Society of Mary because of deep differences concerning ministry and the role of the school apostolate. The Meribah Province wished to remain independent.

A New Phase Begins

The Marianists came to the United States in 1849, first to Cincinnati and Dayton, then to San Antonio in 1852. In 1855 an official, canonical American Province was created with headquarters in Ohio. But the Society rapidly grew and new provinces were started: St. Louis in 1908; the Pacific in 1948; New York in 1961; and Meribah in 1976. Now a new phase in the corporate life of Marianists in the United States is starting with the merging and uniting of provinces.

The hopes and prayers of the members of the newly created Marianist Province of the United States of America are that the move will bring about fresh energy, greater administrative flexibility and, eventually, more religious vocations. ■

by Kathy Khattar Villarreal (B.A. '89, M.A. '96)

Pousson for their challenging classes.

Although Elizondo dabbled with the idea of becoming a doctor and consequently received a chemistry degree from St. Mary's, his calling to the priesthood was much stronger. He was ordained in

"Any advancements in theology, at least in San Antonio, would not exist had it not been for institutions like St. Mary's – one of the first to open its doors to women students and faculty, and today a leader in providing opportunities to Mexican-Americans."

1963. And as he began to serve in his ministries,

He's one of San Antonio's most recognized and respected theologians. And to many across the country, he's known as "the father of U.S.-Latino Theology." But meet him for the first time, and you will see a humble and a most unassuming man who will readily tell you his passion in life: to bring the rich Mexican-American traditions into the Mass and other aspects of the Church.

"I believe deeply in the simple expression of faith by people," says the Rev. Virgilio P. (Virgil) Elizondo (B.S. '57), founding president of the Mexican-American Cultural Center and creator of Catholic Television of San Antonio.

For 40 years, this local boy turned priest has been a strong voice in the American Catholic Church. His "Latino theology" speaks to all people, emphasizing that religion and ethnicity can and should be uniting factors in expressing faith. His work at San Fernando Cathedral, where he served as rector for 12 years, brought excitement and spirituality into celebrations, like the annual Mariachi Masses, the candlelight vigils, Las Posadas and the Good Friday Passion Play, all of which are still enjoyed today by overflowing congregations of people from all faiths.

His message of maintaining cultural traditions has taken off. Just this fall, he received the prestigious 2002 Hispanic Heritage Foundation Award and was named one of Time magazine's "Top 100 Innovators in Theology." His numerous books, including "The Future of the Mestizo – Life Where Cultures Meet," have attracted much attention, and students at the University of Notre Dame, where he instructs during the week, wait for months to enroll in his courses.

The son of Mexican immigrants, Elizondo looks back with pride at his humble beginnings: his West Side home, his encouraging parents, his involvement in Christ the King Church and later, his experience at St. Mary's University.

"St. Mary's was a time of self discovery for me," he says. "The strong presence of the Marianists on campus changed my life. Being a witness to their dedication and devotion made me reflect more deeply on my calling."

Elizondo can easily list a dozen or so of his "favorite" Marianists. He remembers Brother Herbert Leies for his community involvement and the Rev. James Young and lay-professor Leon Elizondo felt a vacuum in the Church.

"The theology of the Church appeared to be separated from the lives and faiths of the people," he says. "We seemed to ignore the beautiful Hispanic traditions, like home altars, processions and rosaries, through which many receive their faith."

Over the years, Elizondo has successfully brought to life these traditions. He believes the greatest challenge of the Catholic Church is also its greatest potential – to incorporate the multicultural gifts of all God's children. And this priest, author, teacher, lecturer is up to the task, as he daily carries out his busy schedule of faith unification. ■

Warming to the Global Approach

by Larry Hufford, Ph.D., International Relations Graduate Program Director

More than 40 years ago, Ludwig Mai, Ph.D., a prophetic St. Mary's University economics professor, created an interdisciplinary International Relations major, integrating history, international economics, international business, literature and political science into a program designed to enhance analytical and critical thinking skills.

The goal of combining these somewhat disparate disciplines was to discourage a one-dimensional compartmentalized approach to the understanding of international relations.

With the collapse of the former Soviet Union and the resultant political turmoil around the world, it has become apparent that critical global issues are best analyzed through an interdisciplinary approach. Other more recent conditions requiring this wider focus include the collapse of the Argentine economy, terrorism, international trade agreements, human rights, the continued proliferation of international narcotrafficking, development assistance, as well as the expansion of the European Union and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

International Relations (IR) graduates gain an understanding of the interrelatedness of issues necessary for developing and analyzing programs and policy in the global arena.

Four decades after Mai's successful foray into cross-departmental program development, the master's degree program offers four areas of concentration: Inter-American Studies, International Economic Studies, International Conflict Resolution and Security Policy.

The curriculum attracts students who want to be a part of the solution to the complex problems facing the world today. It is telling, then, that over the past decade the number of graduates seeking employment in public service and nongovernmental sectors of the economy has increased dramatically.

The curriculum attracts students who want to be a part of the solution to the complex problems facing the world today.

Today, more than 100 students are enrolled in the International Relations Graduate Program, which emphasizes "applied" international relations—careers in government and/or nongovernmental sectors, in addition to traditional private sector employment.

Learning from Practitioners

Students of the graduate IR program have benefited tremendously over the past decade by the presence and tutelage of two Diplomats-in-Residence: Ambassador Eugene Scassa and Senior Foreign Service Officer John Salazar, both of whom have aroused increased interest in public and nongovernmental sectors. They have opened doors for internships with governmental agencies, invited more than 30 high-ranking diplomats to speak at St. Mary's, and served as positive role models for students.

Practicality is fundamental to students pursuing IR careers; therefore, as part of the program, we utilize adjunct faculty to promote that practical approach to study. Those supplemental teachers have included: Samuel T. Scott Jr., a senior foreign service officer who spent his entire career in developmental assistance work; retired U.S. Secret Service Agent Stephen Harrison, Ph.D., who is a former director of White House security and the security coordinator of the 1984 Olympics; Nina Stewart, a foreign service officer who served as deputy assistant secretary of defense for counterintelligence and security countermeasures; and, Roger Spotswood, Ph.D., of the Defense Intelligence Agency, who, at the time of his retirement, was the agency's senior substantive expert on China strategic assessments, military forces and future estimates.

Measuring Achievements

What have been the results over the past nine years?

Ten of our graduates have become foreign service officers. And, thanks to Scassa and Salazar, more than 40 IR students have completed internships within the U.S. Departments of State, Commerce, and Agriculture, and with the U.S. Agency for International Development, the Defense Intelligence Agency, and the Central Intelligence Agency, in Washington, D.C., as well as in locales such as Croatia, Lithuania, Chile, Uruguay, Nicaragua, Belize, Mexico and Bangladesh.

Two students have been recipients of the prestigious two-year Presidential Management Internship, working in the intelligence field at the Department of Defense. Four alumni of the joint J.D./M.A. (law and international relations) degree program have served or are serving in the Judge Advocate General's Corps. Several dual JD/IR graduates work in the areas of human rights and immigration law.

Affecting the Nonprofit Sector

Others illustrate the opportunities available in the nonprofit sector. Graduates of our program work with Women for Women International to develop programs in Colombia, Afghanistan and Pakistan; at PACT, to assist nongovernmental organizations in Mexico, Peru, Mozambique, Angola, Zambia and Zimbabwe; and with Chemonics in Washington, D.C., to launch and advance environmental initiatives. They also work at the Institute of Integrated Rural Development in Bangladesh and the Center for Justice in Maquiladores in San Antonio.

Having active duty military in the graduate IR program, both on campus and at Fort Hood in Killeen, means some students complete and take courses online.

Alumnus Samuel Shattuck is stationed in Saudi Arabia. Among current students, Christine Dunbar is in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, where she is a Farsi linguist. Mark Van Weezondok and Katherine Barber are in Sarajevo and Kosovo, respectively, and Ryan Bentley and Alvin Lewis are in South Korea.

And, Carlo Niño, a young Marine officer, completed his final coursework for graduation while in combat in Afghanistan.

Today, the Internet and the Armed Forces take the graduate IR program throughout the world.

Some travel the world as international trade analysts with the Department of Commerce. Others are employed with the Defense Intelligence Agency and the National Imagery and Mapping Agency, which provides imagery intelligence and geospatial information to the Defense Department.

One IR alumnus, a qualified arms control inspector, is a Russian-German linguist stationed in Germany working for the Defense Threat Reduction Agency. Several are with the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Central Intelligence Agency.

The private sector offers opportunities for IR graduates as well. One is at Science Application International Corp. in a division that provides chemical, biological and nuclear material support to the Department of Defense. Part of her job requires that she write scenarios and participant materials for readiness training exercises related to weapons of mass destruction.

Preparing for the Global Arena

In San Antonio, graduates are employed by the city, working in economic development and international affairs.

A half dozen of our graduates have enrolled in doctoral programs at universities in Texas—Baylor, Texas Tech and Houston—and throughout the country—Old Dominion in Virginia, George Washington University in the nation's capital, and the University of New Orleans in Louisiana.

These alumni, however, represent only the tip of the iceberg. As our program expands, St. Mary's will produce hundreds of graduates with an understanding of major cultural, economic, historical, political and social themes found in the global arena. Our emphasis on applied international relations also will supply them with the critical thinking and analytical skills needed for success in the public, nongovernmental and private sectors in the 21st century.

Ludwig Mai's legacy lives in the vision of international relations that he created and advanced long before most colleges and universities saw the importance of educating with a global view and understanding. ■

Larry Hufford, professor of political science and graduate director of the international relations program, has been at St. Mary's since 1993.

Hufford's background includes stints as a VISTA volunteer and migrant ministry social worker. A popular political analyst in the local media, he earned his Ph.D. from the London School of Economics and Political Science.

Barrios Siblings Cookin' Up Recipes for Success

by Rob Leibold, Associate Editor

Joining a family-owned business can be a stressful proposition. The hours are long; the days are longer. The nuances of the customer dictate the outcome with no guarantee of success.

Two St. Mary's alums have made that transition work. It has taken them from a small downtown Mexican eatery originally housed in a former boat garage to national television show appearances, stellar reviews in national publications and a new cookbook. Along the way their restaurant—Los Barrios—has gained a following of politicians, celebrities and people from all walks of life.

Over the past two decades, siblings Diana Barrios Treviño (B.B.A. '85) and Louie Barrios (B.B.A. '82), have taken their mother's restaurant to heights none had imagined.

Louie credits much of the growth of the business to what he learned at St. Mary's.

"I'd work at the restaurant after classes. This is where I studied," he says. "As a sophomore I took a marketing class. I passed out marketing surveys at the restaurant and used that information in class. Everything I learned in class I applied at the restaurant, immediately. I got an A on the project and increased revenues at the restaurant."

Adds Diana: "What we saw in class, we lived at the restaurant. The professors would use us as examples, which really helped it all make sense."

The two credit their mother, Viola, with getting the business started with a $3,000 loan and moving Los Barrios to its present location in a former Dairy Queen on Blanco Road. They agree, too, that the business jelled when Louie implemented a business plan after earning his undergraduate degree that saw the business expand, literally, several times. And Diana's public relations and marketing skills are taking the business to the next level, including the building of a second location slated to open next spring.

"Los Barrios Family Cookbook," published this past June by Random House, has given them a rare opportunity to expand the family business in unexpected ways.

The cookbook came about after Diana was asked in 1999 to host a segment for a television network's morning show on the River Walk with famed chef Emeril Lagasse. A publishing house editor saw that segment and contacted Barrios about the possibility of doing a Tex-Mex cookbook.

"While my name is on it, it really was a total family effort," Diana says, adding that in addition to the recipes, vignettes about events and people who have graced their lives and business over the years have been included.

"There are many St. Mary's people reflected in the book. They are a big part of the stories," Louie says, adding that on slow nights when the restaurant was just getting going, he would call his fraternity brothers.

"Those guys would come down and fill the place," he says, appreciative of the business and the camaraderie they provided.

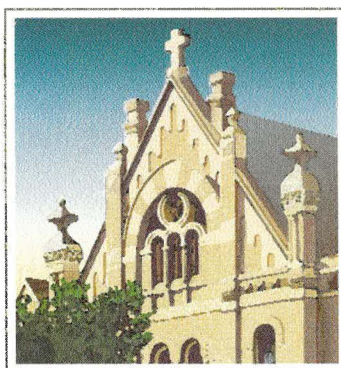

Louie says attending St. Mary's was like coming home after an extended absence. He went to a Catholic grade school and then to public school and one year at a state college before settling at St. Mary's.

"It was nice being at a place where people cared about you. They embraced you just like you were family. St. Mary's was the best move I ever made," he says.

While older sister, Teresa, attended Trinity University, Diana decided to follow her brother.

"It seemed like a good place," she says. "Louie taught me how to drive and how to study."

Now, the two of them are teaching each other how to turn a little family restaurant into a success story that goes beyond their wildest expectations. ■

President's Annual Report

President's Annual Report

The year of our Sesquicentennial is almost over. During this historic year we honored the contributions of the Marianists and the lay men and women who worked with them. I want to thank our alumni and friends who participated in the celebrations we have held throughout this special year.

Today we look forward to future years as we continue our mission of education.

Last year's annual report described the components of the new strategic plan, Vision 2006: A 21st Century Education at St. Mary's University. Now I would like to share with you some of the strategic initiatives we have developed to implement the plan.

Largest Entering Class in our History

We welcomed the largest entering class in our history—more than 660 new freshmen—when the fall 2002 semester began, and the best prepared entering law students since 1997. We have 744 students in the graduate programs; 63 in the doctoral program; and 290 in the first-year law class. These enrollment increases challenge us to provide the campus support services that our students need in order to successfully reach their goals.

Once again, U.S. News & World Report recognized us as eighth in the Best Value category (defined by academic quality and low cost), and 11th overall academically among colleges and universities in the West region, which extends from Texas to Washington state.

Scholarship opportunities continue to expand. The San Antonio Livestock Exposition provided 10 $10,000 scholarships for Bexar County students majoring in the biological sciences. The Sesquicentennial Kick-off Gala netted $125,000 for scholarships and the Alumni Association provided another $275,000. The Marianist Trust, funded out of the salaries of the Marianists employed at the University, continues to provide student scholarships annually.

Reaching Across the Globe

International initiatives continue to expand, with visits to prospective students in Chile and Peru; growth in the semester abroad programs in England, Spain and Austria; and the initiation of several student and faculty exchange agreements with South American institutions and in Mexico.

Through the 2002 "Expanding Our Horizons" receptions in Chicago,

Milwaukee, the Dallas/Fort Worth metroplex, San Francisco, Houston, Atlanta, New York, Denver, Honolulu, St. Louis, Phoenix, Laredo, McAllen, Corpus Christi, El Paso, Washington, D.C., and here in San Antonio, we meet with alumni and friends, and prospective students and their parents, to spread the St. Mary's message. Alumni continue to play an important role in touting the reputation of St. Mary's and recruiting students to the University.

Partnerships with other academic institutions and community and civic organizations are part of our vision to facilitate quality academic and support programs. A few examples are the agreements we have with the Harlandale Independent School District, the nursing and pre-medical programs with the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio, community outreach through the Center for Leadership Development, the Learning and Leadership Center and the SBC Center for Information Technology.

Building for the Future

Construction soon will begin on a new plaza in front of St. Louis Hall with trellised metal archways at the Camino Santa Maria entrance to the campus, a Memorial Plaza honoring deceased alumni veterans, and a perimeter fence to provide a safe campus environment.

The SBC Center for Information Technology, scheduled for completion next fall, will facilitate technology learning for our students and serve as another educational outreach to our neighboring communities.

Charles Francis Hall has been renovated, providing faculty offices, classrooms, art classrooms and studio, student health center and campus technology services.

The Diamondback Café's renovations are providing enhanced dining services, and a new coffee shop soon will be constructed behind the Subway sandwich shop, with covered patio tables and an amphitheater setting.

The 21st Century Leadership Center helps our students with leadership education and research and scholarship initiatives.

Winners in Athletics

We take great pride in the 2002 NCAA Division II Rattler softball national championship, which complements the 2001 NCAA Division II national championship. Additionally, the Rattler baseball team, the Lady Rattlers basketball team, and the men's and women's golf teams won their respective 2002 Heartland Conference crowns.

The student-athletes' academic successes are impressive as well: according to Heartland Conference records, 82 of our athletes were named to their academic honor roll; our athletes have the highest grade point averages in the conference in baseball, men's soccer and volleyball; 43 students are on the conference President's Honor Roll and 39 are on the Commissioner's Honor Roll.

Gifts Expand Student Opportunities

Our athletes' graduation rate matches or exceeds the already high graduation rate of all St. Mary's students.

Closing of the Sesquicentennial

On Sept. 13, the University community came together to witness the rededication of the University to our patroness, Mary. On Oct. 23, we gathered downtown at San Antonio's La Mansion del Rio Hotel in a symbolic return to the beginnings of the enterprise in Texas when the first Marianist educators arrived by stagecoach. Out of that initiative grew St. Mary's University and Central Catholic High School. The final event in the celebration of this historic year will be the Sesquicentennial December baccalaureate and commencement.

Look to the Future

In 2002, we spent time in remembrance and celebration of our history and legacy. Now we move forward with confidence and hope to meet the challenges and opportunities that are outlined in Vision 2006.

I look forward to visiting with our alumni and friends in the coming months to thank you for your continuing commitment to and support of St. Mary's University. I am confident that you will continue to work with us to assure that our students can successfully complete their academic pursuits here at St. Mary's University, and join the thousands of successful alumni in their contributions to family, profession and community. ■

The St. Mary's University Sesquicentennial year has kept the University Advancement Division extremely busy focusing on you – our alumni and friends. I want to commend my associates in the offices of Alumni Relations, Communications and Development for a job well done planning and executing the many activities provided for you throughout the year, beginning with the Sesquicentennial Gala last January that kicked off this stellar year.

Also, I want to thank all of you for the positive support of your alma mater. We appreciate the wonderful feedback many of you have shared with us during the year, and we promise to continue to bring St. Mary's University closer to you through the Gold & Blue magazine, alumni receptions, special lectures, Homecoming and the Fiesta Oyster Bake, to name a few, so you remain in touch with your St. Mary's family.

Our alumni and friends have supported the University financially despite a challenging economic landscape this past year. Thank you for answering our call for contributions to scholarships, capital improvements and student programs. As a private institution, we could not achieve what we do without your generosity, which helps us provide personal attention and powerful programs to the students who attend our nationally recognized institution.

This year, especially, I want to thank all of you for your investment and involvement, both of which are so critical to our success. We remain grateful for your confidence in what we are achieving in the higher education arena.

Finally, as we conclude our Sesquicentennial observance, we celebrate St. Mary's rich heritage of providing a values-centered liberal arts education, and we look forward to a dynamic and promising future.

Thank you for what you do for St. Mary's.

Thomas B. Galvin

Advancement

Hector Flores

Finding Strength in Diversity

Throughout his life, Hector Flores (B.A. '71), has always found someone to champion him and that may be why he has dedicated his personal time to crusading for civil rights.

Flores, elected national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) this past summer, says he remembers several teachers from elementary school to St. Mary's University who related to his Mexican-American roots in Dilley, Texas, and pushed him along the way.

"The interesting thread is that these (teachers) were bilingual Anglos who helped me. Thanks to these teachers who steered me in the right direction," Flores says.

From Dilley, Flores' journey took him to San Antonio to pursue a bachelor's degree in political science at St. Mary's, which he described as a "hot bed of political activism." He worked his way through college as a San Antonio police officer from 1965 to 1972.

After college, he moved to Dallas where he and his wife, Tula, raised three children and where he is the director of recruitment and retention for the Dallas Independent School District.

But his crusade for civil rights did not begin 28 years ago when he joined LULAC. Flores says his cause began in the seventh grade when he debated with his teacher about the exclusion of Mexican history in Texas and how some Mexicans directly contributed to that history.

Now Flores is leading Latinos, encouraging leadership, entrepreneurship and advocacy. As LULAC's newest president, he has a vision of what the organization plans to accomplish in the 21st century. He says Americans share a great strength in diversity.

Flores started making connections with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at their annual convention in July, an unprecedented union for the two largest minority civil rights organizations in the United States.

Interested in building a coalition with farm workers, Flores also opened a new dialogue about immigration issues with Mexico's President Vicente Fox.

Vincent Ramos, Texas LULAC executive director, says the organization has high expectations for Flores because he has demonstrated superior leadership and initiative since he took over LULAC this summer.

"It's not just enough to talk. We want to see outcomes and initiatives that are meaningful and very driven with that goal in mind," Ramos says.

"LULAC is about helping people and developing relationships," Flores says. That's where his strength is found. ■

Alicia Robb, Ph.D. Economist Big on Small Business

Between news of accounting malfeasance and lower-than-expected earnings reports, one might think the U.S. economy is made up only of multinational conglomerates. Lost in the banner headlines and gloomy business outlooks is the fact that small business still drives corporate America.

As a micro-economist in the Division of Research and Statistics at the Federal Reserve Board in Washington, D.C., Alicia Robb, Ph.D. (BA '91), studies small business and what it means to the United States.

"Small businesses are a huge aspect of our economy. Half of all employment in the country comes from them," she says, adding that one of her primary functions is to "conduct surveys to determine how things like bank mergers affect small businesses."

That research is passed on to the highest levels of the Fed, and often influences moves that could affect pocketbooks worldwide.

Robb also compiles research on how various gender and ethnic groups perform in small business.

So, what's it like to have Alan Greenspan making world-driving decisions based on your research?

"It is a great honor and responsibility," Robb says. "I am surrounded here by prestigious people who feel the responsibility. Because of that, we all are highly motivated. Some of these people are the brightest I have ever met, and it is a great group to work with."

After graduating from St. Mary's, Robb earned her Ph.D. in economics from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She worked at the U.S. Small Business Administration before landing at the Fed.

Working among the nation's brightest economic minds, Robb says, leads to constant thinking about what she would tell high school and college students today.

"Do more and be more," she says. "You can't start early enough preparing yourself for your career. Always think long term, not short term."

One advantage Robb says she gained by attending St. Mary's was close interaction with faculty members.

"I remember a few years ago (then president) Father Moder and Dr. Cotrell were in a restaurant here in D.C. We recognized each other and spent time catching up," she says. "My friends were amazed that I would know the president and academic vice president from my college." ■

Our Fondest Farewell to . . .

Hattie Elam Briscoe (J.D. '56), a 1992 St. Mary's University Distinguished Alumna, died on Oct. 17, 2002, at the age of 84. Briscoe was the first African-American to graduate from the law school. She practiced law in San Antonio for more than 40 years, and a scholarship was created in her honor at the law school in 1992.

Donald E. Davis died on Sept. 30, 2002, after a lengthy battle with kidney disease. Davis taught in the Sociology Department from 1977 until his death. He was a faculty member in the University's Upward Bound program, was selected as an "Outstanding Young Man of America" by the U.S. Jaycees, served as vice president and president of the St. Mary's Faculty Senate, co-founded the campus chapter of Circle K, and was a mentor for the Christian Life Community through Campus Ministry. Davis was 49 years old.

Rose Mary Droke worked as a professional singer and private detective before joining St. Mary's in 1970. She held a variety of jobs, including 20 years as director of career planning and placement, before retiring in 1999. Droke also was longtime sponsor of the cheerleading squad and co-moderator of Phi Kappa sorority. In 1986 she was named to San Antonio's Women's Hall of Fame and was later elected a governor of the Southwest Region of the College Placement Council Inc. Droke was the first recipient of the Warren E. Kauffman Award for outstanding service to that same national organization in 1992. Rose Mary Droke died on Aug. 3, 2002, at the age of 67.

Apologies to Anita Saxine, longtime St. Mary's librarian, who was mistakenly listed as deceased in the Summer 2002 Gold & Blue. It was another librarian, Regina Richter, who died Jan. 5, 2002. Saxine is alive and well and resides in San Antonio.

Concerning Our Dear Friends

by Robert B. O'Connor, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Theology, and the Rev. John A. Leies, S.M., Theology Department Chairman

Editor's Note: Bob O'Connor and the Rev. John A. Leies captured the many qualities of our dear friends, the Rev. J. Willis Langlinais, S.M., and Brother Ralph Thayer, S.M., who died Aug. 3, 2002, and Nov. 21, 2002, respectively.

When we speak of the recently deceased, often we describe their lives by the roles they played throughout. I would like to share with you some of the roles through which Willis and I engaged each other for the past 37 years.

Teacher . . . He worked us so hard in Moral Theology we began to think it was immoral.

Colleague . . . We enjoyed countless meetings and committees ad nauseam. For the past decade I was his would-be tech adviser—"would be" because he always expressed more interest in learning about technology than he seemed to have time for.

My boss . . . We always maintained a good, friendly—while not always agreeing—professional relationship.

His boss . . . As chairman of the Theology Department, I pushed him to teach a course. Always semi-reluctant at the beginning due to his administrative workload, he was grateful at the end of the semester and never wanted special treatment because of his position.

Fellow Ecumenist . . . Many Christians and Jews knew and loved Father Willis. I know some people for whom he was the only Catholic or priest they ever knew.

Confessor . . . Our jobs were clear in this role: I provided the sins, he mediated the forgiveness—always encouraging me to reduce his forgiveness workload.

Valued Friend . . . He delighted in joke-telling (and was especially fond of the priest-minister-rabbi stories in which the priest didn't always come out ahead!); he was pleasantly cynical about the increasingly politically correct world in which we lived; and yet he was always upbeat.

It was my honor to have known and loved Willis for the past 37 years. A Marianist monk to the core, he animated the lives of those around him, believing and living the doctrine that God-in-the-world is revealed or concealed by the actions of those who profess to believe in Him. The Rev. J. Willis Langlinais, S.M., enriched my life, the life of my family and the lives of countless others just by being himself. He will be missed. ■

There is on one hand a sadness that we experience – the end came so soon, so fast, so unexpectedly. And so soon after we lost Willis Langlinais and Bill Hamm.

Brother Ralph Thayer, S.M., was always an interesting person, for he had done so many interesting things. His resume says he taught high school at McBride, Coyle, Victoria and Central Catholic. That he coached football, basketball, baseball – and even boxing. He had academic degrees in both history and library science. That he learned how to fly.

I lived with Ralph for 27 years. For me, his heart was set on three things: the study of history, St. Mary's University and the Society of Mary. He taught history here at the University for 38 years and served as a member of the San Antonio Historical Society, the Texas Historical Association and the American Historical Association.

Ralph retired from teaching and administration in 1992, but he did not sit back and rest on his laurels. Instead, he became the buyer for the community, took care of the community cars and was the community chauffeur.

He also was the community barber. I don't know where he learned the tonsorial arts, but he did. For years, every Monday, he faithfully would make himself available to cut hair. I will admit that in our community there are few, if any, full heads of hair left, but still with more than 40 people in the house, the job was not a small one.

We shall miss Ralph. But we also rejoice for his life, his work, his friendship, the years we had with him. When we come to heaven, I think we shall find Ralph talking history with the pioneers and patriots of the past, conversing about airplanes with those who were pilots, talking to educators, engaged in conversation with his family and with all our Marianists, at the same time loving God with his full heart.

Farewell, "Tiger" – we'll meet again, in God's good time. ■
